New Pension Board

By Felix Cotten

Following up its approval of a plan to "freeze" the existing old-age pension tax for three more years, the House Ways and Means Committee voted yesterday to set up a board of trustees, consisting of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of Labor and the head of the new Federal Security Agency, to administer funds collected under the tax.

Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, committee chairman, announced the new social security bill, which makes sweeping changes in the 1935 social security act, had been completed, except for possible minor changes.

Use of Funds Criticized

The provision for a board of trustees, Doughton said, follows substantially the recommendation made by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau when he appeared before the committee March 24. Morgenthau at that time approved suspension of the automatic step-up in the old-age tax, which unless legislation is enacted will take place next January 1.

Criticism has been directed at the Administration for using taxes collected under the old-age tax to pay current Government expenditures. Treasury officials have insisted that this criticism is based on a misunderstanding. Money paid into all trust accounts managed by the Treasury, about 60 in number, are invested, they pointed out, in "special" Government securities, which bear interest at rates provided by law.

"For Benefit of Insured"

Creation of a board of trustees, Treasury officials believe, will make it "clearer to everyone that it is a trust fund established for the benefit of the insured who have contributed to it." A special trust account will be set up. The Treasury thus will get away from the idea that the old-age fund is a reserve fund. The trust account, however, wil be managed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

The Government will continue to borrow the money deposited in the trust account, just as it does funds credited to the unemployment and other accounts, and will credit to the funds the rates of interest legally prescribed.

The effect of borrowing trust account money, Treasury officials have explained, is to cut down the amount of necessary borrowing in the open market.

The board of trustees will be required to submit reports to Congress on the status of the fund.

Doughton said the committee has agreed to old-age tax changes greatly modifying penalties which the law not imposes on delinquent tax-

Roosevelts Greet Nicaraguan President At Union Station; 21-Gun Salute Precedes Triumphal Mile-and-a-Half Ride

By Edward T. Folliard

Gen. Anastasio Somoza, President of Nicaragua, and Senora de Somoza were guests of honor at a state dinner at the White House last night after a crowded day that saw the American Government ascend to new heights of splendor as a host.

In the 139 years since the Government came here from Philadelphia, there was never a reception quite like that which 100,000 witnessed yesterday.

President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt went to Union Station to greet the visitors from Central America, the first time in history this had ever been done.

The martial pageantry that followed was of brief duration, but stunning in effect. After the scarlet-coated Marine Band played the Nicaraguan national anthem and the "Star-Spangled Banner," an artillery battery boomed out a 21-gun salute. Then, riding in an open touring car, the President of 130,000,000 and the President of 1,133,000 moved triumphantly over a mile-and-a-half route, the whole of which was lined with soldiers, sailors and marines presenting arms.

Thirty tanks, with helmeted warriors in the turrets, rumbled along

Johnstown 4-5 Favorite On Derby Eve

Ten Named to Start In Classic; Haight Picks Challedon to Win

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Churchill Downs, Ky., May 5.—I'm taking Challedon. I'm taking the "come from behind" colt to win the sixty-fifth running of the Kentucky Derby here tomorrow. I'm taking a colt who can run on any kind of track. I'm taking a colt who never has shown any quit. I'm taking a well-conditioned, hard-running colt in Challedon.

HAIGHT

In doing so, I'm mindful of all that Johnstown has done. The Belair Stud colorbearer has speed, oodles of speed, but there is the little question of whether or not he can hold his "lick" over the long Derby route. There is the chance that he will stop.

I'm putting Johnstown second, El Chico third, and Technician fourth. That's my story and I'm going to stick to it.

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—If you rushed up to a man on the streets here tonight and swore on a stack of Bibles that Hitler had committed suicide, that Japan had surrendered to China or that President Roosevelt had moved the Capitol to New York, he would respond with four little words, "Who do you like?"

After sundown tomorrow, Louisville might be interested but tonight it is willing to let the rest of the world roll by while its thoughts center on the sixty-fifth running of the Kentucky Derby.

U. S. Averts Collapse of Coal Parley

Negotiations Resumed Under Steelman as He Warns on Civil Strife

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 5.—A resumption of labor contract negotiations between Appalachian coal operators and C. I. O. union miners was brought about late today by Dr. John R. Steelman, of the United States Labor Department, with a public admonition and a challenge to both sides: "You cannot break up this conference and go home to have a civil war!"

The most important and immediate result was to avert a final dissolution of the two-month conference—thus far so fruitless that negotiations collapsed utterly yesterday.

Nevertheless, the last 5,000-odd C. I. O. soft coal miners still in the pits had their orders to quit at midnight, thus completing a national walkout without parallel since 1922 and involving some 460,000 men.

At Dr. Steelman's demand, delegations representing the United Mine Workers and operators began immediate conferences with him.

The picture in the anthracite industry, where concurrent negotiations to replace the hard coal labor contract expiring last April 30 have being going forward, brightened to the extent that a second week's extension—to May 13—of the old agreement, was made.

John L. Lewis, the U. M. W. head, had threatened to pull out more than 100,000 anthracite miners.

A.F.L., C.I.O. Fight U.S. Rule Of Sea Hiring

Two Factions Unite To Fill 150 Pacific Jobs Through Union Halls

The jobs of less than 150 seamen appeared yesterday to have united West Coast C. I. O. and A. F. L. unions, feuding for more than a year, against a U. S. Maritime Commission proposal to staff their ships on the Pacific with men recruited by Government shipping commissioners rather than by union hiring halls.

The new unity was voiced by Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader, meeting yesterday with the full Maritime Commission. He was reported to have declared that he "supported Harry Lundeberg 100 per cent."

Lundeberg, Pacific A. F. L. maritime head, has been Bridges' bitter enemy ever since he withdrew from the C. I. O.'s Maritime Federation of the Pacific more than a year ago. He threatened the Government with a strike last week unless the commission proposal for nonunion hiring abandoned.

The commission announced it would hold a special meeting Mon-

Laborer Held For Handling Gun Near President

A 30-year-old laborer, who was "fooling around" with a rookie Marine's rifle while President Roosevelt and President Somoza approached yesterday, was arrested and held for investigation.

The prisoner, Harry Koff, 400 block Tenth street southwest, a former National Guardsman, told police, Secret Service men and Marine Corps officers that he had been assigned to work opposite the Senate Office Building. He said that, having used the young Marine's rifle to go through the manual of arms, he did it again when a friend approached.

At police headquarters, where he was questioned by detectives, M. R. Allen, of the Secret Service, and a Marine Corps colonel, he was still being held last night. The rifle was not loaded.

King and Queen to Sail Today; 50 Uniforms, Gowns Packed

By the Associated Press.

London, May 5.—A program topped by a naval spectacle at Portsmouth was whipped into final shape today for the departure tomorrow of King George and Queen Elizabeth on their precedent-breaking journey to Canada and the United States.

King George, who will be the first reigning British sovereign to visit the United States or even one of the dominions, spent a quiet day at Buckingham Palace, signing state papers, receiving Prime Minister Chamberlain and dining formally with a few of their majesties' closest relatives.

[The King has appointed a Council of State to rule in his absence, according to the United Press—Editor's note.]

Twenty large wardrobe trunks, carrying the Queen's crinoline gowns and 50 uniforms for the King, and 80 other pieces of baggage were sent off a day ahead to the 21,850-ton German-built liner Empress of Australia, on which the

Navy Cancels Middie Trip To North Sea

Fear of War Blamed; Cruise Was to Include Lowlands And Scandinavia

Secretary of the Navy Swanson last night canceled a cruise of midshipmen to European waters next month, keeping the "backbone" of the Atlantic Squadron in American waters this summer.

No official explanation was made of the move, believed to have been directed by President Roosevelt, but authoritative sources said the growing Administration concern over the European situation caused the order to keep the three battleships scheduled for the trip out of a possible war zone.

Original plans called for the battleships, New York, Texas and Arkansas, with more than a thousand midshipmen aboard, to sail from Annapolis June 2. They were to visit Antwerp, Rotterdam, Stockholm, Heinsingfors and Edinburgh, returning August. The North Sea ports might be dangerous territory for the future naval officers and the three dreadnaughts in case of trouble, which might increase the risk of American involvement, officials said privately.

Absence of the three battleships would also leave the East Coast protected by only a few smaller ships in case of war, it was pointed out.

Bill to Draft Money

Meanwhile, Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, commander of the naval operating base at Norfolk, declared that the Atlantic seaboard and our island possessions in this ocean now "are practically unguarded."

Meanwhile, to the continuous flood of legislation designed to keep America out of war or to prepare her if it comes, was added a bill to draft dollars in a future conflict. The Senate Military Affairs Committee unanimously approved a measure introduced by Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, to force persons with a net wealth of more than $1,000 to buy 50-year Government war bonds paying 2 per cent interest.

The measure provides for a "wealth census" upon outbreak of a war involving the United States. Based on findings, persons with a net capital of from $1,000 to $10,000 would be required to devote 5 per cent of their wealth to purchasing the bonds.

Persons having more than $10,000 would have to pay out a larger portion of their wealth for bonds, with the rate gradually increasing to 75 per cent of wealth of $100,000,000 or more. The full percentages set need not be demanded, it was said, this matter being left to the Treasury, in accordance with the Government needs.

Despite considerable agitation for a conscription of wealth as well as men in time of war, it is believed Lee's bill will have troubled sailing. The Treasury, War and Navy departments opposed a similar measure last year, holding the delay required for a "wealth census" would seriously hold up financing of the war.

Wins Essay Prize

Naval officials said midshipmen of the first and third classes would make a summer cruise aboard the three battleships of about the same duration as the one canceled yesterday. They indicated, however, that cruising would be confined to North American waters, stating that a tour of South American ports was not contemplated.

Admiral Taussig's recommendations for a strong Atlantic defensive force were set forth in an essay submitted to the United States Naval Institute, published in their latest Proceedings. The semiofficial Institute awarded him first prize in their annual essay contest.

Student of Crime, Son of Attorney, Sought in Killings

Phoenix, Ariz., May 5 (AP).—A 22-year-old college student, who, psychiatrists reported, once was impelled to robbery because of an extraordinary knowledge of crime obtained in his prosecutor-father's office, was hunted tonight for the brutal slaying of two automobile salesmen.

The youth, Robert M. Burgunder, jr., was charged in separate complaints with the murder of Jack Peterson, 35, and Ellis Moury, 24, whose bodies were found today trussed and shot in a desert wash near here.

Burgunder, the son of a former Seattle, Wash., prosecuting attorney, entered the Teachers College at Tempe last fall, after his release from the reformatory, to which he was committed in 1937 for a $14 drugstore holdup.

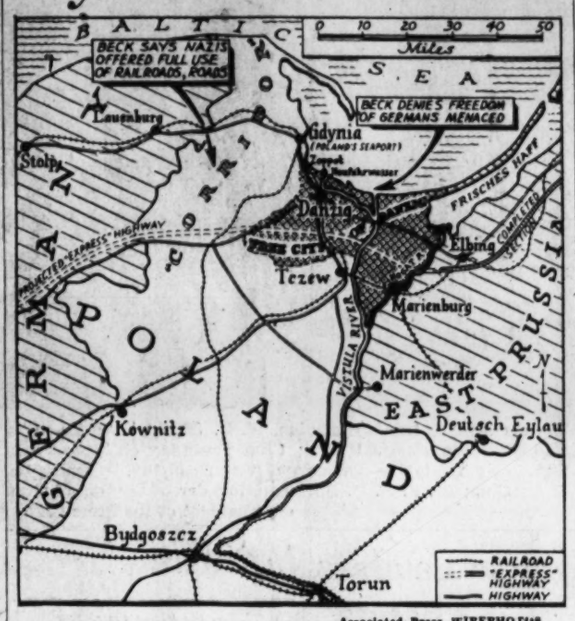
Nazis Insist as Poles Say 'No' to Demands



Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

Map shows in detail the Free City of Danzig and Polish Corridor to the Baltic. Polish Foreign Minister Josef Beck yesterday replied with a "no" to Hitler's "one-sided" demands for return of Danzig to Germany and a Nazi highway across the Polish Corridor

Firm Rejection Leaves Door Open For Negotiations

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, May 5.—Poland today condemned Germany's demands for Danzig and a sovereign right of way through Pomorze and her denunciation of the 1934-aggression pact as "one-sided," but declared a willingness for peaceful negotiations.

Foreign Minister Beck in a 20-minute address before the Sejm (lower house of Parliament) and a note delivered to the German government replied to issues raised April 28 by Chancellor Hitler's Reichstag address and a German memorandum sent to Warsaw.

As a result of the deadlock, diplomats said they believed Hitler might resort, perhaps, by a demonstration, to creating a situation in which world alarm might react to bring about international mediation.

Cue for Mussolini

Such a demonstration, they said, might be planned as a cue for Premier Mussolini to intervene, as in the Czecho-Slovak crisis, with proposals for a settlement.

Whether Poland would agree to foreign mediation was highly uncertain and most observers regarded it as unlikely, but Mussolini was regarded as the logical choice because Italy belongs to the Rome-Berlin axis and has historical ties of friendship with Poland.

It was doubted in foreign circles that Hitler planned any direct action against Danzig and Pomorze (the Polish corridor).

As a restraint against such a move, it was pointed out that it was accepted as a fact that Col. Beck's speech was made with the full agreement and approval of Great Britain and France.

Demands Peaceful Intent

Questioning Germany's aims throughout, Col. Beck enunciated Poland's position as follows:

Danzig—"We have stood and we stand firmly on the ground of the rights and interests of our overseas trade and our maritime policy in Danzig."

Communications through Pomorze—". . . we have . . . no grounds whatever for restricting our sovereignty on our own territory."

A new contractual settlement of Polish-German relations—"Two conditions are necessary for this work to have real value: (1) peaceful intentions; (2) peaceful methods of action."

"Peace is a valuable and desirable thing," the foreign minister declared.

"However, peace, like almost all things in this world, has its price, high but definable. We in Poland do not know the conception of peace at any price. There is only one thing in the life of man, nations

Hitler to Propose Danzig Plebiscite, Officials Hint

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 5.—Germany insists now as before that Danzig must be returned to the Reich, a propaganda ministry official said tonight, obviously a hint from Berchtesgaden where Chancellor Hitler conferred with his aides on the dispute with Poland over demands for Danzig and a strip through the Polish corridor.

[Polish leaders said tonight, according to the United Press, that Germany's curt refusal to negotiate on the basis of Foreign Minister Beck's offer of "reasonable conciliation" may force an early showdown on whether Hitler means peace or war.—Editor's note.]

"The idea of a joint administration of the free city, hinted at by Beck (the Polish foreign minister, in his speech rejecting German demands but leaving open the way to negotiation) is not to be discussed," the German spokesman said.

"As the Fuehrer said in his Reichstag speeech of April 28, Danzig is a German city. We do not deny Poland's right to access to the sea. That is why we are prepared to give Poland a free harbor in Danzig.

"We are also ready fully to respect the rights of the Polish minority in Danzig."

Plebiscite Demand Hinted

[Germany's propaganda ministry indicated officially, according to the United Press, that a "self-determination" plebiscite may be demanded in Danzig—Editor's note.]

Asked whether, in the German view, the door had been closed to further negotiation, the ministry spokesman said "no."

Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop conferred with Hitler more than six hours today at the Fuehrer's Berchtesgaden retreat and left shortly before midnight for Italy.

War Department Completes Plans for Younger Officers

By Elizabeth Henney.

The War Department will make public today a completed plan for "vitalization" of the Army which will be the greatest step in strengthening that service since the National Defense Act at the close of the World War, in the opinion of the War department.

This program, if approved by Congress, will force into retirement in the next seven years, over 2,000 officers from the grades of captain to brigadier general, who are between the ages of 50 and 62 years.

It will at the same time speed promotion and draw into the Army from the bottom an almost equal number of young officers in a ten-year period.

By this method each officer coming into the service as a lieutenant can be assured of reaching the grade of colonel at 52, and can count on a promotion every seven years, instead of facing the prospect of remaining in the same grade for more

Triple Entente Seen

By the Associated Press.

London, May 5.—The British government was reported authoritatively tonight to have agreed to formation of a British-French-Russian military alliance, but details still are under negotiation.

The British also framed a counter-proposal to the Moscow suggestion for a reciprocal guarantee of Baltic and Black Sea states, feeling that so broad a guarantee to those states was not practical at the present time.

The British further put forward a scheme under which the Soviet Union would support Rumania and Poland in the event of aggression against either nation.

Unconditional Offer Reported

This course to bring Russia into the British-French front of nations was understood to have been decided upon at a 90-minute meeting this evening of the committee, attended by Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, Sir Samuel Hoare, home secretary, and Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer.

It was authoritatively stated that Britain's offer to enter a reciprocal military alliance with Soviet Russia was unconditional.

Authoritative informants said the projected alliance would bind the three great powers to come to each other's aid if any one is attacked by a European power, but to exclude such aid in the event of conflict elsewhere, as, for instance, a Japanese attack on Russia in the Far East.

Both Britain and France already have pledged aid in defense of the independence of Poland and Rumania, neighbors of Russia.

Foreign office officials expressed confidence that the British note, responding to the Russian proposals and setting forth the plan as amended by Britain, would be acceptable to Russia.

Russia originally proposed that an alliance should be formed last month before the replacement of Maxim Litvinoff as Russia's foreign commissar. British official quarters, however, were confident that the Russian proposal had not been changed by Litvinoff's retirement.

France already has a military agreement with Russia and it was reported reliably that France had urged Chamberlain to extend this agreement into the old triple alliance of the World War.

Soviet Aid Held Essential

Such an alliance, under which each power would be bound to go to the others' aid if any were attacked is considered in many quarters here as the most likely way of deterring further Nazi-Fascist expansion.

Ever since the World War British foreign policy has steered away from entanglements with the Soviet government. Twice within the last 14 months Britain has refused to ac-

Set Over Until Next Session; Board Is Assailed

By the Associated Press.

House leaders yesterday reached an agreement to defer a decision on the question of amending the labor act until next session, while Representative Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, was calling the National Labor Relations Board "worse than any kangaroo traffic court in the land," and appealing to the House Labor Committee for legislation abolishing that agency as it is now constituted.

"It is necessary for industrial peace and economic stability," he said, "to rid this Government of the present peronnel of the Labor Board, as one would remove a slight skin cancer before it spreads its insidious growth over the body."

Anderson proposed that a new five-man agency be substituted for the existing board of three, and that the Wagner act be extensively revised to strip the board of its judicial functions and limit or withdraw many powers which it now exercises.

Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, went to the defense of the Labor Board. Noting that Representative Hartley (Republican), of New Jersey, had said many lawyers believed the board biased and partial, Keller expressed the opinion that most of Hartley's information came from "Liberty League attorneys" and representatives of reactionary employers.

Keller added that in a great many of the cases which Hartley had cited the Labor Board had been upheld in the courts.

"But the board has not been fair in charges that have been made," Hartley replied.

Keller said that although American Federation of Labor leaders were asking amendments to the Wagner act, all A. F. of L. unions were not in agreement on the advisability of such a step. He said there was "dissension" within the A. F. of L. on the subject.

Anderson argued that the board's own rulings had convicted it of partiality toward the unions of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. And he charged there had been "collusion" between the board and the C. I. O. for the purpose of creating membership in the latter "against the wishes of the workers themselves."

Customs Raid Seizes $26,000 Of Paris Finery

Rich Widow Turned In by Friend, Say Officials in New York

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, May 5.—Customs agents, in a surprise raid last night, confiscated $26,000 worth of furs, hats, lingerie, gowns and jewelry from the penthouse apartment of Mrs. James C. Ayer on charges that she smuggled the merchandise into the United States from Paris.

The raid, made on a tip from a woman described as a "close friend" of Mrs. Ayer, was characterized by one Treasury official as "bigger than the Lauer case." He referred to the recent three-month prison term and $2,500 fine imposed on Mrs. Elma N. Lauer, wife of Justice Edgar J. Lauer of the New York State Supreme Court, for similar smuggling activities.

Up to a late hour tonight Mrs. Ayer, widow of Dr. James C. Ayer, former surgeon of the state board of health, had not been arrested or held for questioning. Her indictment early next week by a Federal grand jury is expected. Well known in society here and abroad, she was said to be under a physician's care at her home tonight.

Goods From Paris

Customs agents said they found the alleged smuggled articles in several trunks. They included a pair of diamond earrings, a black enamel and diamond cigarette case, an ermine cape, a caracul jacket, a silver fox cape and dresses, lingerie and jewelry purchased respectively from the Paris fims of Molyneaux, Chanel and Cartier.

The affidavit set forth that Mrs. Ayer went to France in the summer of 1935, purchased $7,000 worth of dresses and furs, and, returning here on the Europa in September, declared $700 in goods and paid $100 duty charges. A similar journey in 1936, according to the informant, resulted in no payment of duty on $8,000 in purchases, while in 1937, returning on the Normandie, dutiable articles worth $5,900 were brought in duty free.

Informer Gets 25 Per cent

In Paris last summer, the affidavit stated, Mrs. Ayer bought a $450 fur cape, a $2,500 mink robe and other articles valued at $2,000, which she declared at $800, paying duty of $300 to $400.

The informer is entitled to 25 per cent of the amount collected by the Treasury. Rosa Weber, the German maid, who turned in Mrs. Lauer, received approximately $10,000.

Bill to Detain Deportable Aliens Indorsed

House Votes 288 to 61 After Constitutionality Is Questioned by Celler

The Hobbs bill providing for detention of deportable aliens that would not be readmitted to their native countries was passed by an overwhelming vote in the House yesterday, while a joint Congressional sub-committee approved the Wagner-Rogers resolution to admit to the United States 20,000 refugee children from Germany.

Despite charges of unconstitutionality, the Hobbs bill was approved by the House, 288 to 61. The measure would permit the Secretary of Labor to order the detention of certain aliens whose deportation has been ordered, but for whom foreign countries refuse to issue passports.

Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama, sponsor of the bill, held that not more than 550 aliens a year will be detained by its provisions, which are limited to "members of the anarchistic and similar classes," persons guilty of moral turpitude, procurers and dope peddlers.

Nevertheless, a bloc headed by Representative Celler (Democrat), of New York, high ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, which reported the bill, maintained that the measure would deprive aliens of their constitutional rights and is "vicious, intemperate and un-American."

Provides Financial Assurances

In unanimously approving the Wagner-Rogers refugee children bill, the joint sub-committee added amendments to extend the measure to children living in the former Czecho-Slovakian territories now under German administration. Strengthening the safeguards of the bill, a provision was inserted specifically requiring that assurances satisfactory to the Secretary of Labor be given that each child will not become a public charge.

The bill, which would admit the children in 1939 and 1940 regardless of quota limitations, now comes before the Immigration committees of both Senate and House.

Chairman Dickstein of the House Immigration Committee, said further hearings on the measure will be held by his full committee.

English Solons Decline To Sanction Lewis Go

London, May 5 (AP).—The British Boxing Board of Control today declined to sanction a world light-heavyweight championship bout between John Henry Lewis and Len Harvey after giving Lewis a physical examination. At the same time the board declined to grant Lewis permission to box in England.

Lewis, recognized by the National Boxing Association as world's 175-pound titleholder, has been troubled by failing eyesight for some time.

In March, Michigan authorities declined to permit him to box Dave Clark in Detroit. At that time Dr. Daniel R. Donovan, who examined Lewis, reported that the sight of the champion's left eye was "almost nil." Dr. Donovan added that "Lewis was unable to read even headline print of a newspaper and apparently could distinguish only light from dark."

Striking a new blow at kidnaping, the House yesterday passed and sent to the White House a bill which makes sending ransom notes or kidnap threats through the mail a criminal offense. The measure also added penalties under the kidnap law, of fines up to $5,000 and imprisonment up to 20 years or both. The Senate already had passed the bill.

The Interior Department disclosed yesterday Secretary Ickes had been responsible for withdrawal by Representative Burdick (Republican), North Dakota, of a bill which would have given $3,000 to every Indian in settlement of past and future claims against the Government.

The department published a letter which Ickes wrote Burdick after the Representative introduced the legislation at the request of the American Indian Federation.

Ickes said the federation had been soliciting dollar memberships from Indians, particularly in Oklahoma, on a promise that it would obtain Congressional approval of the bill.

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, wants Congress to preserve "the original, pure-strain wild turkey" which he describes as "this noble and peculiarly American game bird important in colonial history."

Smith won approval by the Senate Agriculture Committee for his bill to spend $53,000 for a turkey refuge in his home State.

Alexandria Hotel Provides Strike Data

Explanatory Letter Sent by Board to Residents of City

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Delivery Service, Phone ALex. 247.

The board of directors of the George Mason Hotel has mailed to residents of Alexandria a statement concerning the strike of a group of its waitresses, which has been in progress since January. For approximately five months the hotel has been picketed daily by the five waitresses in question and their friends and sympathizers.

The statement says that in view of "erroneous information" being circulated in connection with the strike, the intention is to inform the public of facts incident to it, as the hotel is a community project, operated by local stockholders. Regarding claims that the hotel is controled and oerated by a New York corporation, which owns 51 per cent of all the stock, the statement says:

"It is true that at first the American Hotels Corporation owned 51 per cent of the common stock, but the failure of the hotel to pay dividends on the preferred stock caused the common stock to lose all of its voting rights, and therefore the control of the hotel is entirely in the hands of t hepreferred shareholders. The American Hotels Corporation does not hold one single share of preferred stock and has absolutely no voting rights and receives only a nominal fee for certain information, statistics, etc., furnished by it to the local management."

The directors said it is not simply a question of increasing the wages of five dissatisfied employes who are on strike, but an increase to these ve would, of necessity, mean increasing the wages of 65 other employes of the hotel, and such a general increase is impossible.

Man Found Shot

Millard F. Padgett, 83, of 217 South Patrick street, was shot in the chest yesterday. Rushed to Alexandria Hospital, he was said to be in critical condition.

Roosevelt Seems Pleased

President Roosevelt, who experienced the fervor of Latin American welcomes when he visited Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro in 1936, was the supervising playwright of yesterday's pageant, and he apparently was pleased with the result.

Riding to Union Station in the sunshine, he saw the crowds lining the avenues, the bright uniforms of the Marine Band and the cavalry, artillery and infantry.

"It's wonderful," he said to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, who greeted him at the terminal. "It's a great turnout, and I am so pleased."

The spectacular welcome set the pattern for others to come, including that for the King and Queen of Great Britain on June 8.

In the criticism that such a display of military might was unseeming for a peace-loving democracy, those in charge had a ready answer. Rather, they had a ready question:

"How would the head of a foreign state feel if he arrived here and found no crowd awaiting? And how much of a crowd do you think would turn out if there were no show to see? We can't be outdone in courtesy by other countries, can we?"

Traffic Jammed

The cables along Pennsylvania and Constitution avenues were put up yesterday nearly three hours before President Somoza's arrival, and the result was a traffic jam that affected many interstate trucks. Maj. Brown promised to reroute such traffic the next time.

The White House gates were closed early in the morning and kept closed throughout the day and night. Only employes and authorized persons were allowed in the grounds.

President Roosevelt and the robust, 43-year-old Somoza were together almost constantly from the time the Nicaraguan "strong man" arrived. Following a "diplomatic circle," in which ambassadors, ministers and other heads of missions were presented, there was a small luncheon.

At 3 p. m., the two Presidents again got into the "Sunshine Special" and started for Mt. Vernon, where Gen. Somoza placed a wreath on Washington's tomb. Returning by way of Arlington, he placed another wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

To the dinner at the White House last night, President and Mrs. Roosevelt invited most of those who had served on the official reception committee at Union Station earlier in the day.

Gathered around the U-shaped table, with its red tulips, white lilacs and maidenhair fern, were, besides the two Presidents and their wives, Miss Lillian Somoza, daughter of the Nicaraguan visitors; Dr. Manuel Cordero Reyes, minister of foreign affairs of Nicaragua; Lieut. Octavio Sacasa and Lieut. Pedro Nolasco Romero.

Garners Present

Also there were the Vice President and Mrs. Garner, the Speaker and Mrs. Bankhead, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de Bayle, all the members of the Cabinet except Secretary of the Navy Swanson and Postmaster General Farley (who left town after the Union Station ceremony); Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator and Mrs. William E. Borah, Representative Charles A. Eaton.

Gen. and Mrs. Malin Craig, Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, Stephen T. Early, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles and Mrs. Welles, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman Philip, George T. Summerlin, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Mrs. Warren D. Robbins, Mrs. Henry L. Kennedy Moves To Give D. C. City Assembly

Board of Education Would Be Exempted From Its Authority

With action on the Griffenhagen plan for reorganization of the District government at a standstill, Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday filed a bill to give Washington an elected Municipal Assembly—empowered to reorganize at will.

At the same time, he asked in a second bill that the Constitution be amended to grant national representation to the Capital City.

The assembly would be composed of 21 members and have virtually full legislative power over the District, excepting activities of the Board of Education. It would have jurisdiction over streets, alleys and "public parks and places" in the District.

Commissioners Excepted

Administrative powers of the Commissioners could not be limited by the assembly, neither could their salaries be changed by it. The register of wills and powers of courts now existing would likewise be protected from change.

National representation would consist of one or two Senators, as Congress might decide, and a number of Representatives based on population. Votes of the District in the electoral college would equal the total number of its members of Congress.

Although the Griffenhagen plan proposes a council of seven member, Representative Kennedy said he did not recognize the municipal assembly plan as contradictory to basic reorganization proposals made by the Griffenhagen experts.

Decision Up to President

The experts' plan is viewed as doomed, however, unless President Roosevelt sees fit to advocate it. District Commissioners will meet in executive session with Representative Kennedy's sub-committee on reorganization Wednesday, to discuss their counter proposal.

Capitol Hill leaders in District legislation viewed the two Kennedy bills introduced yesterday as the outcome of renewed local interest in suffrage and as a desire to get several proposals before the President for his consideration—when he turns his attention to the District government, as he has indicated he will.

Sixteen members of the proposed municipal assembly would be elected from assembly districts and five from the District at large. All would have been citizens of the District for three years previous to their election and for six months a resident in the district voting on them.

Salary $1,000

They would have to be at least 25 years of age and their salary would be $1,000 a year. They would meet twice monthly, and would have a president and vice president selected from their number.

The assembly would be empowered to levy taxes and appropriate for municipal purposes and make recommendations to Congress on legislation affecting the District.

A board of election commissioners to supervise the voting would be composed of six members, appointed by the presiding judges of the municipal and police courts.

Barrymore's Wife To Ask Divorce; Scorns His Suit

New York May 4 (INS).—Elaine Barrie is going to sue John Barrymore for divorce. To that end, she took the initial steps today, laughing off the suits he filed Wednesday for a separation and recovery of $300,000 in property and cash.

Gaily "pooh-poohing" her temeramental 57-year-old husband's court actions, Elaine visited her attorney, Jerome Wilzin, and gave him orders to prepare the divorce papers.

There was an element of relief in Jack's voice as he jocularly, though with a little bitterness, spoke over the telephone to reporters, emphatically remarking that four wives are enough for any man and he doesn't care whether or not Elaine sues for divorce.

Vote to Close Unity Conference May 10; Publications Merged

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 5.—Methodist delegates decided today to hold twice-daily business sessions as a depleted treasury forced early adjournment of their conference uniting three long-separated factions into one 8,000,000-member church.

The unification meeting, which previously had set no adjournment date but had outlined programs through Sunday, May 14, and planned to remain in session longer, voted today to wind up business Wednesday, May 10.

A "declaration of union" service proclaiming formally the merger of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Protestant Church and Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was set for the night of adjournment. It previously was scheduled for the following Friday.

Publications Consolidated

Rushing through the formulation of a single church government, delegates approved today a plan for a single board of publications.

Knottiest problems remaining included:

Assignment of bishops to the various jurisdictions of the new church with indications many will be transferred from sections in which they now are working.

Unification of a mission program, including a decision as to whether there shall be a single mission board or seperate boards for foreign missions, women's missionary work and domestic missions.

The question whether women shall be given full clergy rights.

Pension Funds Federated

Major accomplishments to date include:

Establishment of a single board of education.

Establishment of a single board of temperance.

Federation of pension funds for retired ministers previously administered by the three churches separately.

Decision to retain the stutus quo of church publications, leaving to the first general conference the problem of whether to issue six jurisdictional weeklies or one national paper with jurisdictional sections.

Election by Protestant delegates of their first bishops in 111 years.

King and Queen Sail Today for Canada and U. S.

King

royal party will sail from Portsmouth at 3 p. m. (9 a. m., E. S. T.).

The sovereigns are due at Quebec May 15. They will journey through Canada to the Pacific Coast and back again to Niagara Falls, where, on June 8, they will enter the United States for a four-day visit which will include stops in Washington, New York City and Hyde Park. They will be away from England a total of six weeks.

It was announced tonight the King and Queen would return on the 42,000-ton liner Empress of Britain, flagship of the Canadian Pacific fleet. This liner which was at Port of Spain, Trinidad, today winding up a world cruise, will sail from New York May 16 for Southampton for a general overhauling before sailing on the royal mission.

At the station tomorrow the departing sovereigns will be met by Queen Mother Mary, the Duke and Duchess of Gloucester and the Duke and Duchess of Kent. Officials of the British government and United States Ambassador Kennedy, will bid them farewell.

The train is due to arrive at 2:15 p. m. at Portsmouth, where the keys of the Portsmouth fortress will be presented to the King.

Plane Escort Planned

As the liner leaves the harbor she will be met by a squadron of royal air force planes which will escort her as far as The Needles. At Spithead the ship will pick up the cruisers Southampton and Glasgow, which are to escort her across the Atlantic.

The battle cruiser Repulse, on which the King and Queen originally were to have made their voyage, but which is being kept home because of the European crisis, will accompany the royal squadron a short way out.

Seventeen ships of the home fleet were preparing today at Portland to form an "honor guard" for the Empress in the English Channel.

The relatively small party will have all the facilities of a ship which has capacity for 1,200 passengers.

The King and Queen probably will see a movie every night during the nine-day voyage. They ordered more than a dozen films to be put aboard, comedies predominating.

Closely guarded in the liner's strong room were gifts the King and Queen are taking for President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Their nature was a secret.

The admiralty announced today that the cruisers Southampton and Glasgow would visit New York from May 24 to May 31. The Southampton also will visit Boston from June 1 to June 6.

Paris Pleased At Firm Tone Of Beck Reply

Officials Reiterate French Pledge to Back Poland's Position

By the United Press.

Paris, May 5.—French official quarters expressed complete satisfaction tonight with Polish Foreign Minister Beck's speech and reiterated that France is committed to and Poland on Danzig or any other question which the Poles may consider to affect their vital interests.

The French had only praise for Poland's firm refusal to tolerate unilateral German annexation of Danzig or any other solution imposed by force or threat which would bar Poland from the Baltic sea. A French foreign office spokesman summarized French opinion of Beck's speech by declaring:

"The exposition of Polish policy in reply to Hitler's denunciation of the German-Polish pact made a profound impression in France because of its firm courtesy and its udeniable arguments without the slightest provocatory tone. Beck's speech was a masterpiece of diplomatic style."

Beck's firm warning to Hitler revived French hopes of an agreement with Russia for a common front against the dictators. Indirect assurances from Moscow that the retirement of Maxim Litvinov as foreign commissar does not imply a change in Russian foreign policy strengthened this hope.

Gem-Case Figure Wins New Trial

A week before she becomes eligible for parole, Mrs. Eula Mae Bennett yesterday won a year's fight for a new trial on the charge of transporting stolen jewelry in excess of $5,000 in interstate commerce, which brought her a sentence of a year to 18 months in Occoquan.

Mrs. Bennett, convicted with her husband, James Bennett, won the rehearing by a Court of Appeals ruling which reversed its earlier decision.

Army Completes Plan to Advance Younger Officers

Army

This forced retirement is in no sense a "purge" of the Army as is sometimes thought and is not a new plan. It has been worked out for years. Each officer so eliminated will be retired on three quarters of his pay (the same rate he would receive if he remained in the servic until 64), will be given a year's notice to prepare himself for a career in civilian life and will be on call to be returned to the Army for duty in time of a national emergency. World War officers below the grade of colonel will be advanced one grade on retirement. It is thought to be the fairest method to separate the men who are over age in their grade from the service and to attract young men into the Army.

A situation now exists where so many officers (who are not only over age for their grade but actually within three years of each other in age) occupy the upper brackets of the service, that their retirement for age at almost the same time will leave the Army with too few officers at the top unless a controlled plan is put into effect.

Proposal Outlined

This condition will be remedied by a process of increasing separation from the service to a total of 4.35 per cent of the officers of the Army each year who are over age in their grade or found disqualified by other legal reasons.

To balance this a sufficient number of additional officers in the bottom grade will be taken in each year for the next ten years to make an even flow of promotion with an approximate ten-year difference in age instead of three years. This will insure that each officer will serve long enough in every grade to qualify him for the next grade. By the end of seven years a normal flow of promotions will have been attained and the annual attrition of 74.35 per cent will maintain that rate.

The European powers have found, as has the United States Army and Navy that in order to mtaintain an efficient defense service, the officers must be young enough and vigorous enough to withstand the physical strains.

While it is admitted that many good officers would be removed at a time when they could still render excellent service yet other officers of equal ability will be advanced at an age appropriate for their duties. This system will benefit 83 per cent of the Army, officials predict. The other 15 per cent will be retired on three-fourths salary. They will form a nucleus however, which can be called on in an emergency.

The need for this vitalization arose from a situation which has been known as the "hump" in the Army for many years. To explain that "hump."

With the postwar demobilization in 1919, the Army was so reduced in size that some drastic measure was necessary for bringing it up to sufficient strength. Bill No. 242 of the Sixty-Sixth Congress in 1920 was written with that in view and was called the Army reorganization bill.

In many points very efficient, there were two clauses in that bill which threw a mnokey wrench into the service. The first was Section 24, on filling vacancies, which provided that by examination all who had served as war-time officers would be allowed to come back into the service. It further specified that those officers who returned to the service in such a fashion would be given credit for the year (1919-1920), when they had been out of the Army, and that that year would count as Army service.

Only Slight Contrast

This, to begin with, created a feeling of anoyance among those officers who had stayed with the service and who now found that year counted for nothing with them in their standing for promotion, whlie those who had been out got full credit for service they had not performed.

To further aggravate this situation, officers were taken in so fast by 1926 the number of additional officers taken in was about 5,800. As late as October, 1938, this number had decreased by only 1,500 officers, leaving some 4,288 officers to constitute the "hump." These officers now ranged in grade from lieutenant colonel (144 extra officers) through major (with 2,750 extra officers) into the upper files of the grade of captain with 1,394 extra officers. And yet the age of those officers differs by only about three years (they range in age from 43 to 46 years) and in their length of service by only two years.

The effect of this was to stagnate promotion to an almost paralyzed state, and keep the large percentage of post-war officers from any chance of attaining ranks of command at an age when they would still be physically and mentally equipped to give their best service.

Also the Army has found it increasingly difficult of late years to attract a sufficient number of young men into a service where possibility of promotion was almost nil.

Would Deplete Service

An even more serious angle of the situation was the fact that for almost 20 years more that situation would continue unless some drastic step were instituted. Then, when that hump (of 4,288 officers now between the ages of 43 and 46) reached the statutory limit of 64, they would retire so fast that the service would be improved.

In such case, those below the hump would surge to the top, but another hump would have to be formed to fill the gaps at the bottom, and the vicious circle would start again.

The present plan will eliminate from 219 to 381 officers a year, a total of 2,329 in the seven years. Normal retirements and casualties will serve to eliminate the rest of the hump.

With the exception of 300 Air Corps officers who will be taken into service this year, the Army will be increased by only 127 extra officers per year from the bottom rank for the next ten year period.

The War Department made public a chart showing the extent promotion will be speeded up under the seven-year plan. Taking the latest official promotion list appearing in the October 20, 1938 Army Directory, the chart reveals how many officers will be promoted to colonel, lieutenant colonel and major as the result of normal vacancies and the enforced retirements resulting from the plan.

In the fiscal year, 1940, it appears, the lieutenant colonel standing No. 219 and all those above him will be promoted to colonel. Similarly, all majors down to and including No. 260 will advance to lieutenant colonel. The following year, 173 lieutenant colonels will be promoted to colonel, down to No. 392, while by the end of 1946, all present lieutenant colonels and the present senior 193 majors will have been advanced to colonel.

Milk Inquiry Halted; More unds Sought

$2,500 Virtually Gone; Capital Price Held Under U. S. Average

The District milk investigation was recessed yesterday over the week-end while Chairman Bates, of the House sub-committee on public health, tried to obtain promises of another House appropriation.

The $2,500 granted by the House Accounts Committee, Bates said, shortly will be exhausted and the first week's experience indicates hearings may continue for several more weeks.

Yesterday's session was brief and consisted of further cross-examination of Leslie C. Frank, senior sanitary engineer of the U. S. Public Health Service.

One development of the cross-examination of Frank was the shedding of further light on the comparative price of milk in Washington and cities of 500,000 population or over.

B. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, brought out that the price of milk in Washington in 1936, when the Public Health Service survey was made, was 13 cents until November 1 and thereafter 14 cents a quart, producing an average yearly price of 13.2 cents.

This compared with the average price in the South Atlantic States for first grade milk of 13.5 cents and of the Nation of 13.3 cents.

Elliott Roosevelt Finds Majority Wants Neutrality

Fort Worth, Tex., May 5 (AP).—Elliott Roosevelt said tonight in his regular radio broadcast the majority of answers to his query on what Texans thought of war favored the United States remaining neutral unless attacked.

"Fifty-one per cent would back to the limit the Administration's anticipated policy of lending diplomatic and perhaps financial aid to the democracies and the applying of economic pressure against the enemies of the democracies in 'short of war' methods of assistance," Roosevelt said.

"Thirty per cent would prefer that the United States maintain a strict isolation policy to insure against any foreign entanglements whatsoever, and 19 per cent would, if the Government so willed it, be willing to side with the democracies in open warfare against aggression."

Gen. D. I. Sultan Ordered to Special Duty in Capital

The War Department yesterday ordered Brig. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan, former District Engineer Commissioner, to special duty here.

Officials said he would report to Gen. Malin Craig, Chief of Staff, within the next few days for a special engineering assignment. One source suggested that it might be in connection with plans for expanding and strengthening the Panama Canal contemplated under the President's defense program.

While the War Department would not confirm it, authoritative sources said that Gen. Sultan is slated to succeed Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall as Deputy Chief of Staff, when the latter succeeds Craig in August.

Pendergast Case Key Witness' Body Recovered

Kansas City, May 5 (AP).—Violent death—an apparent suicide—of a potential key witness for the Government sharply punctuated today the series of investigations into Tom Pendergast's badly shaken political stronghold.

Three workmen pulled from the Missouri River the body of Edward L. Schneider, 46-year-old business aide of Pendergast. He apparently leaped into the water Monday from a bridge where his car was found, containing suicide notes saying "This ordeal for the past month has been too much and it is getting worse all the time."

Meanwhile, civic audit groups searched for records to account for financial dealings of the city government amounting to millions of dollars.

Church of the Week

Lewis Church Is Outgrowing Its Buildings

Original Chapel and Part of Parsonage Must Be Revamped

Lewis Memorial Methodist Protestant Church, Third and Hamilton streets northwest, must revamp its space this summer to accommodate the increasing enrollment.

Transformation of the original frame chapel in the rear of the church into Sunday school quarters, and part of the parsonage into a fellowship hall, as well as renovations in the present school rooms must be made, the Rev. John A. Trader, pastor since 1935, said yesterday. A new $40,000 educational building is planned soon.

Typical of the community programs of the church, missionary project of the Church Extension Society of the Maryland Annual Conference, are the "family night" entertainments, which are attracting scores to the parish monthly.

Rev. J. A. Trader

Initiated last October by the Men's Brotherhood, of which Sherrard Tupman is president, the "nights" have featured addresses on the Coast Guard and Boys' Club, in addition to other entertainment. A play, entitled "A Womanless Wedding," will be next Friday's attraction. The men's Bible class, Brotherhood unit, is taught by Rufus N. Horsey.

Character-building activities include the Boy Scout Troop and the Cubs, which has eight dens of 65 members, with Charles Stacey as leader. A Girl Scout troop is being formed.

The junior vested choir of 32 voices, directed by Mrs. Trader, and with Mrs. Rose Lawrenson as choir mother and Miss Lillian Wines as organist, and the young girls' choristers led by Mrs. Herbert Carruthers, and Mrs. Blanche Peake as choir mother, are essential units of Lewis Church.

When the cleric came from his Cherrydale, Va., charge, where he had served six years, Lewis Memorial Church had an average Sunday school attendance of 75, and an enrollment of 100. Today the school boasts 325 members and an average attendance of 500. The church membership has jumped 200 in that time.

Mrs. Herring

Founded nine years ago as a memorial to Dr. Theodore Hamilton Lewis, president of both Western Maryland College and the Methodist Protestant Church in America, the church's new structure was dedicated in 1937.

In line with the Methodist Protestant policy, all women's activities at Lewis Memorial Church are coordinated under the Woman's Auxiliary, headed by Mrs. Ruth Herring. Youth groups are the Senior Christian Endeavor Society, Mrs. Clifford Housely, counsellor, and the Intermediates, of which Lawrin Kenise is president and Mrs. Horace Drummond adviser.

Paul Lindsay is president of the 22-man official board, also including Charles Mullican, secretary, and Paul Burtis, treasurer. Malcolm D. Lamborne is Sunday school superintendent.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at 11 a. m. tomorrow and the Rev. Mr. Trader will speak on "The Aristocracy of the Attentive." A junior story sermon, "Keeping the Light," will be told.

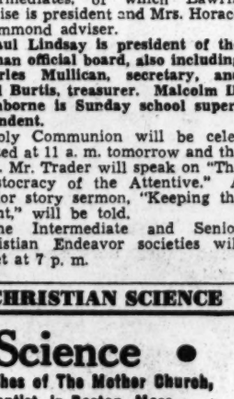
Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS

"O SACRED HEAD, NOW WOUNDED"
Bernard of Clairvaux

"O sacred Head, now wounded,
With grief and shame weighed down;
Now scornfully surrounded
With thorns, Thine only crown;
O sacred Head, what glory,
What bliss till now was Thine!
Yet, though despised and gory,
I joy to call Thee mine."



The authorship of this ancient Latin hymn is ascribed to Bernard of Clairvaux. Paul Gerhardt in 1656 published a free translation of this hymn in the German language. The English translation was made by the Rev. James W. Alexander from the German.

office, issued a bitter commentary on Beck's address.

Likened to Czech Position

Korrespondenz likened Poland's position to that held by former Czecho-Slovakia in the Nazi mind.

The British and Polish attitudes immediately before and after the signing of their mutual assistance pact, it said, indicate the spirit of the agreement: "An unmistakable tendency toward a coalition directed exclusively against Germany."

"It is a parallel to the Czech-French-Soviet pact system which on paper also was open for Germany," the commentary asserted.

"The Polish foreign minister asks at the end of his exposition what really is going on.

"In Germany a strong impression prevails that certain speeches which were made not only by irresponsible Polish political and military men, and disturbing measures which were taken in the border districts speak an only too clear language.

Initiative Placed on Beck

"If Mr. Beck believes he has found understanding and tolerance in Germany for the break in the 1934 policy of understanding and for entrance of Poland into the English encirclement front, and that he has presented valid reasons for rejection of the solution proposed by Germany, we must disappoint him as to this respect."

The Propaganda Ministry informant said the offer of the Polish Government to negotiate a new treaty with Germany was not sufficient and, pressed for clarification, added:

"The note (from the Polish government delivered today) expresses a general desire for a new treaty. Next Mr. Beck must come and formally ask that we negotiate and accompany this request with a concrete suggestion as to how the new treaty is to look."

(Hitler denounced the 1934 German-Polish ten-year non-aggression pact in his Reichstag speech last Friday and the Polish note today expressed willingness to negotiate a new treaty to replace it, but on a basis of absolute equality.)

From a source close to the Foreign Office, it was learned there is disappointment in government circles over the lack of invective and turbulence in the Beck speech—it is found to be somewhat difficult to answer such a well-poised speech.

The evening radio news opened with a brief resume of the Beck speech, starting with the words: "The Polish Foreign Minister delivered a speech before the Sejem in which he declined Hitler's proposal."

The resume was mostly without editorial comment, except for a remark that "Beck was not loaded with historical knowledge." Hitler at Berchtesgaden had before him both the text of Beck's speech and the Polish note replying to the German denunciation of the nonaggression pact.

Hitler "None Too Pleased"

Preliminary indications were that Hitler was none too pleased.

Unless the inspired commentary service Dienst Aus Deutschland was in error, Hitler found after a conference with Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop that:

Beck's address did not furnish a basis for further negotiations;

The address was evasive;

Poland has driven herself into a blind alley;

Germany will continue to insist upon speedy solution of the Danzig question (which can only mean the return of the free city to Germany);

German honor is involved to a greater degree than Polish honor;

Poland has cast her lot with Britain and must bear the consequences.

The Polish note was not handed to the German government until six hours after the lower house of the Polish Parliament had convened in Warsaw to hear Beck's address. This fact delayed official German reaction.

Anxious to Confer on Poles

Rome, May 5 (AP).—Fascists tonight expected that the response of the Rome-Berlin axis to Polish Foreign Minister Beck would be decided tomorrow at a meeting between Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano and German Foreign Minister von Ribentrop.

Despite Buck's stand, it was indicated that Premier Mussolini had not given up hope of finding a basis for peaceful settlement of the Polish-German issue.

Italy, meanwhile, pushed ahead in her drive to create an ever greater military machine built on the principle of a "quick war."

Announcing an $85,000,000 increase in army and air force estimates for the year beginning July 1, the government declared it wanted to prepare to unleash a terrific opening onslaught in any conflict with "certainty of victory."

The Fascist press followed up Beck's speech with renewed admonitions to Poland to heed Germany's demands and accept "solemn assurances" from Germany rather than depend on British-French pledges of aid.

Virginio Gayda, the Fascist newspaper spokesman, stressed Italy's friendship for Poland and indicated that Italy desired to remain neutral. Diplomats interpreted this as a hint that Poland could rely on Italy as a just mediator, mindful of Polish interests.

Bridges Carries Complaint to Maritime Commission

Text of Beck's Reply to Hitler

By the United Press.

Warsaw, May 5.—Following are Polish Foreign Minister Beck's point by point answers, as contained in his speech before Parliament today, to Fuehrer Hitler's demands of April 28:

DANZIG

HITLER—Danzig is a German city and wishes to belong to Germany. The city has contracts with Poland forced upon it by the dictators of the peace of Versailles. Danzig must return as a free state into the framework of the German Reich.

BECK—The free city was not invented by Versailles, it existed for centuries. We stand firmly on the ground of our rights and the interests of our overseas trade and our maritime policy in Danzig. We are seeking reasonable and conciliatory solutions. . . I got no reply to our proposal of March 26 for a common (Polish-German) guarantee of existence and rights in the free city and I ask myself what is the real aim of it all? Was it the freedom of the German population in Danzig—which was not menaced—or a matter of barring Poland from the Baltic, from which Poland will not let herself be barred.

THE POLISH CORRIDOR

HITLER—Germany must receive a route through the Polish corridor (Pomorze) and a railway line at her disposal, possessing the same extraterritorial status for Germany as the corridor itself has for Poland.

BECK.—In the matter of the future of Danzig and of communications through Pomorze it is still a case of one-sided concessions which the government of the Reich seems to be demanding of us. A self-respecting nation does not make one-sided concessions. Where is the reciprocity? It looks rather vague in the German proposals . . . I insist upon the term "Urovince of Pomorze" because the word "corridor" is an artificial invention for this is an ancient Polish land. We have given Germany all rail facilities, allowed its citizens to travel without customs or passport. We have suggested an extension of these facilities to road transport. Again the question appears—what is the real aim of it all?

1934 Non-Aggression Treaty

HITLER.—The so-called (British military) guarantee offer would compel Poland, under certain circumstances, to take military action against Germany in event of conflict between Germany and any other power in which England, in her turn, would be involved. Therefore I look upon the agreement which the late Marshal Pilsudski and I concluded as having been unilaterally infringed upon by Poland and no longer in existence.

BECK—Certainly neither Great Britain nor Poland have any aggressive intentions whatever, but they were determined in the defense of certain basic principles of conduct in international life . . . The Polish-British agreement has been used by the Chancellor of the German Reich as a pretense for a one-sided repudiation of a treaty which the Reich concluded with us in 1934 . . . However, every treaty is worth as much as the consequences which follow it. And if the policy and conduct of the signers diverge from the principles of the pact we have no reason for opposing its dissolution . . . There have appeared tendencies to use it as an instrument for limiting the freedom of our policy, or as a grounds for demanding from us one-sided concessions contrary to our real interests. It has lost its real character. There is no need to mourn the pact.

New Non-Aggression Proposal

HITLER—Germany offers in return (for Danzig and the corridor route) to conclude a 25-year non-aggression treaty with Poland; a treaty, therefore, which would extend far beyond the duration of my own life.

BECK—The proposal for extension of the pact for 25 years has not been put forward in any definite form in recent conversations. (Hitler asserted that "the Polish government rejected my offer" of the extended pact.)

POLISH RIGHTS IN DANZIG

HITLER—Germany is prepared to recognize all Polish economic rights in Danzig and, secondly, insure Poland a free harbor in Danzig of any size which also would have a completely free access to the sea.

BECK—It still is a case of one-sided concession. A self respecting nation does not make one-sided concessions . . . the population of Danzig is today predominantly German (96 per cent) but its livelihood and prosperity depend upon the economic potentialities of Poland.

SLOVAK INDEPENDENCE

HITLER—Germany is prepared to join in a guarantee of the independence of Slovakia by Germany, Poland and Hungary—which in practice means the renunciation of an unilateral hegemony in this territory.

BECK—I must state that I heard the suggestion for the first time in Chancellor's April 28 speech. It is not our custom to make an alliance in the interests of others.

POLISH-GERMAN TENSION

HITLER—The worst is that Poland now, like Czecho-Slovakia a year ago, believes under pressure of a lying international campaign that it must call up troops although Germany has not called up a single man and has not thought of preceeding against Poland in any way.

BECK—It seems to me I already have defined our actual attitude . . . peace certainly is the aim of the hard work and strain of Polish diplomacy. A few conditions are necessary for this word to have real value. Firstly, peaceful intentions; secondly, peaceful methods of action. If the government of the Reich is actually guided by these two conditions its relations with our country are possibly on a friendly basis.

CONSULTATION

HITLER—I endeavored to solve a question which intimately affects the German people by a truly unique compromise and to solve it to the advantage of both countries . . . If the Polish government attaches importance to the new contractual settlement of Polish-German relations the German government is prepared for it.

BECK—The motives for such an agreement must include the word "peace" . . . If such conversations materialize the Polish government will, according to its custom, regard the problem objectively with a view to the experiences of recent times but without refusing its best will. Peace is a valuable and desirable thing. Our generation which bled in several wars surely deserves a period of peace. However, peace, like almost all things, has a price—high but definable . . . We in Poland do not know the conception of peace at any price. There is only one thing in the life of men, nations and states which is without price—that is honor.

GUARANTEE OF FRONTIERS

HITLER—Germany is prepared (if Poland agrees to the Nazi demands) to accept at the same time the present boundaries between Germany and Poland and regard them as ultimate.

BECK—I have to state that this would be recognition of our own property indisputably, de jure and de facto, and so this proposal cannot alter my point that the German claims with regard to Danzig and the Corridor remain one-sided.

day, after which Bridges and his group would meet again with commission members.

The commission's plan calls for four ships, now staffed with less than 150 men, to be transferred from other service to a Seattle-Orient run, under managing agent agreements to be signed momentarily.

The commission, which now operates no ships on the Pacific, has never used the hiring halls, but has staffed its ships from lists made up by Commerce Department shipping commissioners. On the West Coast, all hiring is done through union halls.

Civil Service Question

At yesterday's conference, Bridges, accompanied by eight other union representatives, heard commissioners contend that union membership could not be required as a prerequisite for Government employment, in accordance with repeated statements of President Roosevelt. The commission declared that seamen on their ships were civil service workers.

It was learned that Bridges contended that the seamen were not actually civil service workers, coming under the "Schedule A" exemptions, and did not have the protection of permanent tenure which bona-fide civil service workers enjoyed.

Compromise Sought

A maritime official declared Bridges did not threaten a strike unless the plan were dropped, since "he hadn't got that far yet, but it is obvious what he intends." He added that if Lundeberg called a strike, Bridges would not let his men cross A. F. L. picket lines.

Meantime, it was learned that the controversy, hanging fire for some time, had precipitated a sharp interdepartment difference of opinion.

Acting under President Roosevelt's instructions, Admiral Emory S. Land, commission chairman, conferred with Labor Secretary Perkins last week in an attempt to settle the dispute, it was reported. Land insisted that the law required recruitment from shipping commissioners, citing a law passed in 1872. Miss Perkins argued that the National Labor Relations Act was equally valid and applicable.

Bridges Accepts Fact

A paradoxical element to yesterday's conference was the fact that the four ships in question are now staffed largely with CIO seamen, who would be beached should Bridges' and Lundeberg's demands prevail, and would be replaced with AFL members. Bridges is reported to have recognized the fact and to have admitted that it "was just one of the vicissitudes of going to sea."

The Commission is seeking union acceptance of a compromise by which union hiring hall lists would be sent to the shipping commissioners, whence the names would be taken when jobs were being filled.

The unions' position is that such a system would not guarantee that union men would be hired and that favoritism and discrimination would creep in.

cept Russian suggestions for stopping aggression in Europe.

Now, however, the British prime minister is said to have come to the belief that an agreement with Russia is essential at almost any price.

The Government, meanwhile, gave full approval to the statement of Polish Foreign Minister Beck rejecting German demands on Danzig and the Polish corridor, but offering to negotiate on a peaceful basis.

Sources close to the government said Beck had defined Britain's as well as Poland's stand not only in contending that the Danzig problem could be settled peaceably if Germany genuinely desired to negotiate it on a basis of equality but also in refusing "one-sided concessions."

Supreme Soviet Summoned

Moscow, May 5 (AP).—Russia's Parliament—the Supreme Soviet—was summoned today to meet May 25, but British circles in Moscow asserted there was no clarification tonight of the Soviet attitude toward the British-French alliance.

A London report that Britain now favored a triple military alliance with Russia and France was received silently by Soviet leaders.

Convocation of the Supreme Soviet tossed a new complication into an already enigmatic diplomatic situation, although observers pointed out this session was long overdue. The last was held in August, 1938.

The call was issued almost immediately after Polish Foreign Minister Beck, announced in Warsaw his polite but firm rejection of Germany's demands concerning Danzig and the Polish Corridor.

Setting of the convocation date at May 25 stirred immediate speculation over what new announcement of Soviet foreign policy might possibly be made then.

A. M. A. Chief Calls Health Bill Unsound

Sharp criticism of the Wagner national health bill as "unsound" and "not in the public interest" was voiced yesterday by Dr. A. W. Booth, of Elmira, N. Y., chairman of the board of trustees of the American Medical Association.

At Senate sub-committee hearings on the bill, Dr. Booth said "its enactment would prove a costly mistake, jeopardizing the welfare of the people and seriously compromising the future development of the science and art of medicine in the United States."

Dr. Booth, who said he had not read the bill in its entirety, based his objections on opposition of the A. M. A.'s house of delegates to a Presidential committee report on which the Wagner measure was founded.

Says "People" Don't Know

In an exchange with Senator Wagner on the question of compulsory health insurance, Dr. Booth declared "we believe that the people do not know what is best for them in medicine." Organized medical units, said Dr. Booth, "know what the country needs in the way of medical care."

When members of the committee pointed out that the bill does not provide for compulsory insurance, Dr. Booth expressed fear that "this entire bill is a tendency to centralize the management of medical care in Washington." He added he was "afraid that it is a veering into state medicine, to which we are opposed."

Dr. Booth suggested that politics and graft might result from the bill, which provides Federal grants to the States of at least $80,000,000 in the first year of the national health program.

"So far as this bill is concerned," said Dr. Booth, "hunger, nakedness, cold and storm are to be left to wreak their damage, the bill proposing only to provide medical, hospital and nursing service to cure the damage for a while after it has been done."

Dr. Booth asserted that the A. M. A. had authorized appointment of a committee "to confer and consult with the proper Federal representatives relative to the proposed national health program" but "this committee was not consulted in the framing of the pending bill."

Criticism of certain details of the bill was offered by members of the committee of physicians for the improvement of medical care, a group which has "revolted" from the A. M. A. It was represented yesterday by its president, Dr. Richard M. Smith, of Harvard University; Dr. John P. Peters, Yale; Dr. Robert B. Osgood, of Harvard, and others.

and states which is without price—that is honor."

He charged Hitler had used the Polish-British mutual assistance agreement "as a pretense for a one-sided" denunciation of the Polish-German nonaggression treaty.

The German government, he said, made its decision "without consulting the views of either the British or Polish governments as to the character of the agreement concluded.

"It was not difficult to do so, for I expressed immediately on my return from London my readiness to receive the Ambassador of the Reich, who did not avail himself of the opportunity until this day."

The ambassador, Dr. Adolf Hans von Moltke, returned to Warsaw today.

payers and allowing them more time in which to pay.

At present, employers are taxed 3 per cent of their payrolls by the Federal Government for unemployment insurance. If they pay State unemployment insurance taxes, they are entitled to credit them against the Federal levy up to 90 per cent of the latter, provided they make the State payment prior to January 31 each year.

Considered Too Harsh

Doughton said the committee considered this too harsh and voted that taxpayers who were in arrears on their 1936-37-38 State taxes would be allowed to take the stipulated credit on their Federal tax if they paid their State taxes prior to the sixtieth day after enactment of this proposal.

Challenging salary provisions in the orders, Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, who failed in Wednesday vote to block the mergers, said he will raise parliamentary points of order against the salary items if they are included in an appropriation bill.

May Precede Relief Bill

The new Byrnes bill may contain provisions definitely authorizing fixed salary items, removing doubt of the President's power to do so in his orders. The revised Byrnes measure probably will be considered by the Senate and moved to the House in advance of House action on the President's $1,762,49,000 relief recommendations, now being investigated by the House Appropriations Committee.

'Mutiny' Takes Over Columbia In Revival

Famous Maritime Tale Still Is Ace Picture; Three Stars Shine

"Mutiny on the Bounty" is still a fine picture.

Of a fine May morning it is not a little encouraging to find that though precedents may quiver, the impregnable may be attacked, the Academy Award winner of 1935-36 and the Columbia Theater's new feature is still a peach of a film, boasting performances by Charles Laughton, Clark Gable and Franchot Tone that are still stunning.

Time may have glazed Charles Laughton's magnificent portrait of sadist Capt. Blight into a thick varnish of Major Bowes' impersonators and the vivid detail of the Englishman's playing may have escaped you, but it remains a rich figure.

From the moment the tyrannous captain of the "Bounty" clambers up the side of his ship one is never free from the cruelty of the man and what he represents. Before his arrival, the scene in Portsmouth Harbor almost represents a setting for "Pinafore." Men are pressed into service for his Majesty's fleet, bumboat women hover about, even a fellow named Porter figures in the action and there seem to be no shadows to cast their coming events before hand. But with a straddling walk and obtruding jaw, Bligh appears. With Franchot Tone as the ambitious midshipman, the captain is characteristically curt. The officer second in command is played by the rugged and colorful Clark Gable, a Cumberland fellow who has grown up with a passion for the sea.

Tale of Sweeping Action

It is rather a late hour to retell the Charles Nordhoff-James Norman Hall story, but any time would be opportune to praise the sweeping fashion in which the film was directed by Frank Lloyd. If the film does seem lengthy, that is natural, for it is. Two hours and ten minutes are required to unspool it, but some two millions of dollars and several years were necessary to make it.

There are, however, many scenes which one may have forgotten in the 4½ years that have gone by since it was released: The splendid views of full sails against the wind, the anguish of a sailing-ship becalmed and helpless on a glassy sea, the sharp comparison between the strictly disciplined life on the Bounty and on the lovely island of Tahiti, the life or death struggle of Bligh and his followers to conquer the sea in a small boat and the stirring tirade of Earnest Midshipman Byam at the court-martial.

For it is this tirade, as an introduction at the beginning of the film explains, that was the achievement of the mutiny, that is the spirit of the film.

Reform in the rotten practices of Britain's navy—and for that matter, all navies—at the close of the eighteenth century was vital.

Mutiny Changed Law

"The law," cries Byam, "permits unscrupulous and cruel men to bring terror and death to others." You can't always, he infers, change men, so the law must be changed to control them.

And the beauty of this tidy moral, as Messrs. Nordhoff and Hall have recorded it, is that the mutiny brought about a change in marine law.

Furthermore, it is a rollicking action film, even in company with some of our present-day whoppers, and a film well worth revisiting.

The Columbia has only one short this week and that on the timely subject of baseball, "Diamond Minds." As its title might imply, its humor is pretty labored and it is announced dryly, but its snaps of some of our own Nats in Florida training are definitely interesting. The all-inclusive newsreel has a shot of President Roosevelt opening the New York World's Fair thusly: "I declare the fair open to all mankind," a remark which we bet that, under his breath, he qualified to: "All mankind that has 75 cents!"

Messenger Paid $10 for One Line

Jim Miller, messenger boy, thinks he'd like to be a writer of screen scripts—at $10 a line.

Director Michael Curtis has just presented him with a check for $10 for the line he contributed to "A Family Affair."

John Garfield, Priscilla Lane and Curtiz were puzzling out a scene in which John Garfield goes into a beer parlor. All were convinced that Garfield should say something when the waiter brought his drink. But no one could think of anything to say.

Miller, delivering the next day's call sheets, overheard the conversation. He blurted out, "I can get better beer than this in Brooklyn."

The line went into the picture. The messenger boy got a check for $10—and Curtiz' congratulations.

'Society Lawyer' and Eleanor Powell Feature New Bill at the Capitol

"SOCIETY LAWYER." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by Arthur Somers Roche, adapted to the screen by Frances Goodrich. Albert Hackett, Leon Gordon and Hugo Butler, with Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo, Eduardo Ciannelli, Lee Bowman, Frances Mercer, Ann Morriss, Herbert Mundin, Frank M. Thomas, Edward S. Brophy, Tom Kennedy, Clarence Kolb, Pierre Watkin, Ian Wolfe, Paul Guilfoyle and Joseph Crehan. Directed by Edwin L. Marin. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

There is still polish, fascination and thrill in the story of "Society Lawyer," this week's major screen attraction at Loew's Capital Theater. I say "still" because this same Arthur Somers Roche story was picturized in 1933 under the title of "Penthouse," with Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy in the costellar roles, and was one of the more or less breath-taking exhibits of its year. It continues to possess the vital qualities of romance, excitement and suspense.

BELL

This is one of the tales that seem favorites of the scenarists, however, that suffers a little from being dated. It goes back to a day when gangsterism was in its heyday and involves the counterplay of interests that were more strenuously opposed in the social scale than they are today. The racketeer night club owner, the killer mobs and the shady sirens of the night, who comprised a conspicuous element of the social scene back in the near-prohibition era, have largely passed from acute public consciousness. Aside from this slight antiquity, "Society Lawyer," as I have said, is as good a crime story now as it was six years ago.

The whole thing hinges upon the enthusiasm of a young socialite attorney over the defense of underworld characters in the courts. He brings about the acquittal of the most notorious hoodlum of them all and wins that wealthy reprobate's undying gratitude. Then he breaks with his betrothed, just as he has a few hours earlier with her lawyer father, senior member of his firm, and finds himself interested in a case of murder that presents many baffling aspects

Murder on the Roof

A young woman is shot dead at a gay penthouse party, given by the rival of the equally sinister crook Chris Durant has saved from the chair. Durant is warned off the case on threat of death, and so takes it, gleefully, in defiance of the powers that prey but do not pray. He, Tony Gazotti and Pat Abbott, the night club singer, work the thing out to a finely retributive conclusion, with Signor Gazotti doing a little expert pistoling on his own account to make the denouement complete.

The three principal roles are played by Walter Pidgeon, as Durant, the legal light; Virginia Bruce, as the night club girl; Leo Carrillo, perfectly cast as Gazotti, and Eduardo Ciannelli, in the role of the homicidal host. Mr. Pidgeon and Miss Bruce appear in the roles that were played by Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy in the original production of the story. They do quite as well as their predecessors. Carrillo, to repeat, is perfectly cast and Ciannelli always has been one of the theater's most capable "heavies."

In addition to these, Lee Bowman, Frances Mercer, daughter of the famous sports writer; the late Herbert Mundin, Edward Brophy, Tom Kennedy, Clarence Kolb, Paul Guilfoyle and Joseph Crehan do their share to maintain the high level of excellence that marked the first picturization of a romantic melodrama that is a little better than the average run. Edwin L. Marin's direction is nicely paced and the production is in every sense adequate to the requirements of a picture that is in no sense "big."

Eleanor Powell Triumphs

On the stage at the Capitol this week, Eleanor Powell, foremost of the feminine tap dancers and "queen" of the President's Birthday celebrations, achieves a hit that is not at all out of proportion to the time, effort and charm she devotes to the half-hour act she has brought to Washington for her first stage appearance here in several years. Miss Powell is on stage for about twice the duration of the usual headline turn and during that period chats intimately with the audience, does impersonations of Katharine Hepburn and Jimmie Stewart, dances as only she can, in every tempo known to music and Terpsichore, and concludes her offering with the hula-hula she did in "Honolulu." If Eleanor ever had any doubts of her popularity in the National Capital they ought to be dispelled by now. She is assisted by Andy Iona's Hawaiians, the same band that appeared with her in the film already mentioned. They are no mean addition to a rousing interval of song, dance and persiflage. In tribute to Miss Powell's popularity here and her contributions to the President's birthday celebrations the past two years, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen occupied a box yesterday afternoon and took a bow in response to the star's cordial tribute.

The stage proceedings are initiated by Gaynor and Ross, roller skaters, and then include Tommy Martin, one of the better magicians, and Sid Tomack and the Reis brothers, "The Three Crackpots," in an interlude of clowning that went over with the acclaim it deserved for versatility, if nothing else.

Phil Lampkin's reminiscent overture and the usual house features complete a recommended bill.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 5.

SOCIAL NOTES: The newsreel shots released in the theaters last week showed one of the new Clipper planes being christened by Sonny Whitney . . . In the reel, however, Mr. Whitney was referred to as "Cornelius Vanderbilt, jr." . . . Whitney heard of this on Monday and immediately arranged for the correction . . . "I wouldn't mind," he complained, "if you had given me any other name but that" . . . "Why?" the film official protested. "What's wrong with the name 'Vanderbilt?'" . . . "I don't object to that," replied Whitney, "—but 'Junior!'"

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Jimmy Durante's horse, Westbrooke, won in the seventh race at Jamaica the other day . . . Durante's racing colors are blue and gold—the New York World's Fair colors . . . Jimmy has official permission to use those colors—permission which finally was granted, but not without some objection on the part of Mr. Whalen . . . Grover at first refused to award the colors to the owner of a one-horse stable. "New York's my home," Jimmy finally convinced Whalen, "and if anybody starts countin' how many horses a guy's got, it'll only prove that New York's a one-horse town."

DRAMA DEPARTMENT: John Emery accepted the leading role in "Wuthering Heights" on three days' notice. The critics were very kind to him, although they panned the play . . . After the opening, Emery waited for the morning papers to read the first reviews. He left his table, went outside to buy the papers, read them and returned to his group —with dark smudges painted around his right eye . . . "Look." said Emery, "what the critics gave us."

FINANCE DEPARTMENT: The elephant which butted its mate into a moat at the Prospect Park Zoo and then met the same fate last week, now offers a food problem for the Zoo's attendants. The injuries seem to have increased the elephant's appetite—and the officials have been puzzled . . . The one man in New York who knows how to meet a food problem for elephants is Billy Rose . . . During the rehearsals of "Jumbo," Rose discovered how much it cost to feed the elephants. He issued no refutation when word spread through Broadway that Billy Rose was feeding his elephants chocolate bars before meals—to spoil their appetities.

COOKING DEPARTMENT: Vogue magazine is publishing a series of favorite recipes by distinguished authors . . . Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, author of the Pulitzer Prize winner, "The Yearling," submitted her recipe for making blackbird pie, using 24 blackbirds . . . "And is this unusual?" Mrs. Rawlings was asked . . . "No," she confessed, "but I add one touch. I go out into the field and shoot all the blackbirds myself."

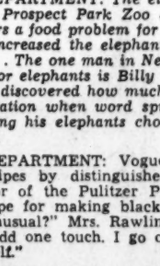
ART DEPARTMENT: Picasso's painting, "Guernica," will be shown today under the auspices of the American Art Congress at the Valentine Gallery . . . "Guernica," almost 400 square feet, is the largest single piece of modern art extant . . . After Picasso had agreed to the exhibit here and arrangements had been completed for making the shipment, the temperamental artist changed his mind, and the arrangements were canceled . . . The next week he finally agreed—and had it not been for that one temperamental outburst, "Guernica" would have been lost forever. For the boat on which it originally had been scheduled for shipment was the French Line's Paris—which sank in the harbor at Le Havre.

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Tuesday night after the opera a party was tendered at the Gripsholm in honor of the Danish Crown Prince and Crown Princess. The invitations included the request that all guests wear their "small decorations"—buttonhole-size replicas of their original decorations . . . Walter Damrosch, however, misunderstood and arrived with his shirt-front covered with ribbons and medals . . . Earle R. Lewis, Assistant General Manager of the Metropolitan Opera, sat at the Royal Table and bowed toward Damrosch. "Mr. Damrosch wrote the opera we presented, "The Man Without a Country,'" Lewis explained, "and for a man without a country—that's a helluva lot of medals."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif, May 5.—Our established stars haven't paid much attention to the horde of newcomers until the last few weeks when, in many instances, youngsters have pushed ahead of them. Four well known players tested for the second lead in "Disputed Passage," but after looking tests over, veteran director Frank Borzage chose lovely, young, fresh Judith Barrett.



HOPPER

And keep your eyes on Patricia Morison, she's going places.

Janice Logan, who did a small part in "What a Life," now goes into a leading role.

And Susan Hayworth, leading lady in "Beau Geste," ditto for Bob Burns.

Helen Gilbert, who was discovered playing the harp in "The Great Waltz," has leaped to the lead in the new Hardy picture. They tell me she has everything—youth, beauty, sings, plays harp and piano. And I hear she has been chosen for the part Eleanor Powell was talked of for "The Dancing Co-Ed." Eleanor will be saved for "Brodaway Melody of 1940."

Even our Los Angeles railway station, which needed it oh, so bad, has been glamorized. The luxurious waiting room is the dream of every weary traveler. There are individual easy chairs, instead of benches. Nice place to wait for that $30 every Thursday!

The Encino paper has burst out in a rash of poetry since the Gables moved into their valley.

Ruth Terry, Twentieth Century-Fox young thrust, is making whoopie at the New York World's Fair with Col. and Mrs. Patterson, of the New York News.

You've got to hand it to George Cukor. If possible, he'll give a friend a job every time. You'll see Florence Nash, sister of Mary, in "The Women." In days gone by she was one of New York's top comediennes. And in her spare moments writes poetry—but good. Been published, too.

Charles Dickens once gave his birthday to a little girl, whose natal day was on February 29—which came 'round only every four years.

Leo Carrillo plans to give up his birthdays to crippled children.

The gossips are quiet about Alice Faye and Tony Martin. He canceled $4,500 in Buffalo to spend one week with her in the deep South.

Paramount's looking for a vehicle for Charles Laughton. Well, they still own A. J. Cronin's "Hatter's Castle"—the best thing he ever wrote. I'm going to get that picture produced—or else—

Doris Dudley left her mink farm for Jack Barrymore. Now I expect Elaine will wire: From minks to jack rabbits!

'Dark Victory' Enters Second Earle Week

Davis and Brent in Their Best Roles; Talley Stars on Stage

Once in every two or three years the Earle Theater management finds a picture so powerful as to command the breaking of its practically unbreakable rule against running a show for more than one week.

That's the case with "Dark Victory," Bette Davis' latest, also one of her best pictures. A strong stage show, featuring Opera Singer Marion Talley, is up to the caliber of the cinema attraction.

A tradition-shattering picture, this "Dark Victory." It proves that a happy ending isn't necessary for box-office appeal. Also that a heroine can be an absolute neurotic and still be a highly satisfactory heroine.

Miss Davis plays a member of the Long Island hunting and drinking set in a practically jittery tempo. It's suitable and right, though, since she is supposed to be a very sick girl with a brain glyoma that dooms her to an early death. Her every move and gesture betrays nerves that are racked and screaming.

Heedless of Fate

When she finally discovers that her case is really hopeless, her recklessness takes the form of trying to fill every 24 hours with riding, dancing, drinking and night-clubbing. She casually steals all the boy friends and husbands in the offing, insults her friends right and left, goes on what looks like a champagne diet, but still manages to win a cup for riding, saying with bitter gayety, "I want to show the gentry I still have what it takes."

All this hectic carrying-on is just an attempt to get away from herself, to drug the fear and dread of death. Not until she stops fighting and re-accepts the understanding love of her doctor (played by George Brent) is she able to find peace and shed the fear of death. In one of the many lyrical lines of the picture she says, "Everything is all right because we're not afraid. It is our victory over the dark."

Though Miss Davis is completely the star of the picture, record-breaking performances are contributed by other players. George Brent turns in the most sympathetic and carefully shaded performance of his career. Geraldine Fitzgerald, one of the very brightest of Hollywood's girls, adds to the laurels she garnered in "Wuthering Heights" by playing flawlessly as Bette's friend and secretary. Humphrey Bogart does an entirely new type of role for him, that of an Irish horse trainer, impudent and humorous, but a frustrated person for all that. Henry Travers, as the kindly old family doctor, and Dorothy Peterson as a pleasant and wholesome nurse, are exactly right in their parts.

Stage Bill Still a Hit

Direction that is both expert and inspired is responsible, too, for much of the success of "Dark Victory." Not only does the picture move with a resistless rush to its climax. It also shows a constant flow of nuance and adeptly conceived incident.

Marion Talley's lovely voice inspires heavy demands for encores. She was at her best in "Siboney" and "Make Believe." Also, she looks no-end fetching in a gown of green-flowered taffeta. The ballroom dancing of Shayne and Armstrong, the acrodancing of Iris Wayne, the comicalities of Joe Mandel—all these go to round out a topnotch show.

But to many folks the big moment in the bill must have been the balancing of the Roxyettes on those huge oranges, especially when the oranges ran away from under the girls. It was both a dancing and fun circus. MARY HARRIS.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 5 (INS).—Dick Powell, who has been a fugitive from movie musicals too long, is signed, sealed and all but singing the hero role in "Leave It To Me"—though you can't get anybody on the M-G-M lot to admit it. However, I happen to know that Dick has already put his "X" on a contract for the Sam and Bella Spewack play now running on Broadway. Not only will he have the swell Cole Porter music to sing, but he also draws Frank Morgan as his co-starring partner.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The story of "Leave It to Me" is not a new one. It's based on "Clear All Wires," which played on Broadway and was later made as a movie starring Lee Tracy by M-G-M. I have no idea what the studio paid for the remodeled play, for they already own the movie rights to the original. I almost forgot "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" is in this musical, but Dick won't sing it because it's a girl's number.

Joel McCrea, who made the hit of his life working on the railroad in "Union Pacific," is being loaned by Sam Goldwyn to Warners for "Career Man." In this yarn "Career Man" meets "Oomph Girl," for none other than Ann Sheridan, the college boys' delight, is set for the femme lead. A story of the diplomatic service, this gives Joel something different from his usual Western background. Just by way of adding a little more "oomph," glamorous Lya Lys, who didn't get much of a chance to score in "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," is also in the cast of "Career Man," which starts May 15 with Lloyd Bacon directing.

I've just been told about a surprising new invention, a synthetic larynx, which Gilbert Wright is offering to the movie industry. Supposed to be able to imitate any voice, it would be a great boon for dubbing in foreign languages if it is as practical as it sounds. For example, say it's an Errol Flynn or Tyrone Power picture, the synthetic larynx is set to reproduce the Flynn or Power tone and pitch so that the French or Spanish voice comes out sounding like the star's own inflections. The idea came to Wright when Disney sent out word he was looking for someone who could "speak like a harp." Might be valuable, too, for some of these foreign imports you can't understand half the time.

History came near repeating itself in the case of Constance Moore, movie star, and Johnny Maschio, Hollywood agent. Miss Moore's mother arrived here to try to annul her young daughter's marriage, just as the Havens-Monteagles did when Maschio married their socialite daughter, Jehanne. But, according to the aunt with whom Constance made her home before she became Mrs. Maschio, her mother, Mrs. J. G. Smith, faces a stumbling block for this bride is over 18. In California a marriage at 18 is legal without parental consent, so there will probably be no annulment.

If you can believe Paramount, the woman hunt for a Scarlett O'Hara was child's play compared to the search they're starting for an unknown songbird to play in "The Life of Victor Herbert." With a straight face they tell me the musical centers of Europe, America and South America will be combed in the fond hope of uncovering a paragon who can sing like Jeanette MacDonald, Lily Pons and Grace Moore combined, and act like a Bette Davis. The girl, when and if they find her, will be launched to stardom in this Andrew Stone musical—but after all the fanfare is over Dorothy Lamour will probably get the part—or will it be Florence George?

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Parky, jr., heir to Parkyakarkus, weight seven pounds, arrived yesterday. His official moniker will be Clifford J. Einstein, after his ma's grandfather; Irene Dunne went to the women's press preview of "Invitation to Happiness" while her husband, Dr. Francis J. Griffin, represented her at Westwood; Fred MacMurray, Fred Zimmerman, New York theatrical magnate, with Watterson Rothacker and other males, saw the new movie at the village theater; Buster Collier asking his dad, Willie, sr., for an autograph following his swell performance in this picture; Geraldine Spreckles dropping in at the Tropics flanked by two husky cavaliers, Errol Flynn and his pal, Mud Ernst; Joy Hodges is back among us with "yumph" honors, but no fresh engagement in sight.

Bob Taylor, a regular attendant at the baseball games, cheering lustily for Hollywood; Lupe Velez, making so much noise she scared the umpires; Ann Sothern, Roger Pryor and dozens of other baseball-minded movieites; Gail Page is hostessing a party Tuesday for Lola Lane, who heads East on a personal appearance engagement; Anna May Wong, meeting Shirley Temple for the first time on the Matsonia, headed for Honolulu; Connie Boswell spied eating corn beef and cabbage with her spouse, Harry Leedy; Virginia Fields planes out for two weeks in New York.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

IT'S A LANDSLIDE TO GUNTHER'S ..AND HERE'S THE REASON WHY!

Gunther Brewing Company
Baltimore, Maryland

Gentlemen:-

On last Thursday evening, at a dinner of our members, held in the Empire Room of the Hotel Lexington, a very thorough and comprehensive test was made to determine the relative merits of famous imported and domestic beers.

It was gratifying to see how the standards of brewing in this country have produced beer so excellent in taste, body, and color; that three domestic beers were virtually comparable in every way with three world-famous imported beers.

Thirty-seven experts, all master bar-men and wine stewards, engaged in this test, and none were permitted to know the names of the beers they tasted until the test was concluded.

You may also be gratified to learn that Gunthers was one of the highest ranking beers, receiving, as it did, the second highest number of votes for first choice. It was only exceeded by one world-famous imported beer in the opinion of these experts.

Yours very truly,
INTERNATIONAL BARMEN ASSOCIATION
Harry Bozaard
Harry Bozaard, President

By this Pledge

Let it be known that Gunther's beer will always be brewed according to the highest standards of the art of brewing. We will never use any but the finest ingredients, and thus maintain the same remarkable dry lager quality that places it among the finest beers, domestic or imported.

The high cost of making Gunther's prohibits the giving away of premiums or prizes. All the value is in the Beer!

LOCAL BEER MAKES GOOD! We've been telling you that not even the costliest imported beers were more dry or beer-y than Gunther's. Now 37 International Experts have proved it!

Who Are The Experts?

It was at the recent congress of International Experts (all bar and wine stewards of different nationalities), a comparison was made of the best European and Domestic beers.

Not a single man knew what beer he was comparing. They were labeled 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. All he knew was that some were imported, some domestic.

And when the 37 experts had made all their comparisons here was the result:

FIRST: 3 world famous imported beers had scored 48 points.

3 fine beers made in the U. S. A. had scored 50 points.

SECOND: Each man had been asked to pick the beer he preferred to all the others.

The voting was close. They were all good beers. A European beer won. But Gunther's, the beer so well known in Baltimore and Washington came next and actually led the other two fine imported beers!

HERE'S HOW EXPERTS VOTED FOR 1st CHOICE
(The beer they liked best!)

Import A	24.3	Import B	16.2
Domestic X (Gunther's)	18.9	Domestic Z	13.5
Domestic Y	16.2	Import C	10.9

Total—100%

Try Gunther's

Gunther's has always claimed it was as dry and beer-y as an imported beer! Now these International Experts have proved it!

And now you can prove it for yourself. Taste it. Compare it with any beer made regardless of the price! Drink it for one week . . . and we bet you'll never go back to the sweeter-type beers. Remember Gunther's is the original and only "Special Dry Lager" made in this part of the country. Gunther Brewing Co., Baltimore, Md.

For rich, hearty, full-bodied ALE . . . look for Gunther's in the beautiful green bottle.

MARYLAND IS FAMOUS FOR GUNTHER'S DRY BEER-Y BEER

Beck States The Issue

In Joseph Beck's declaration to the Polish Parliament yesterday, the note of surrender under pressure was conspicuous by its absence. But so, also, was any suggestion of belligerence.

The Polish foreign minister did not shrink from the challenge hurled at his nation by Chancellor Hitler, who, at the last meeting of the Reichstag, reinforced his demands by denunciation of the German-Polish agreement of 1934. Col. Beck met that challenge without flinching. Poland, he indicated, will not retreat in the face of threats. She will not abandon any of her legitimate interests in Danzig or her sovereignty over the Corridor. She will not permit herself to be barred from the Baltic. "We in Poland," he said, "do not know the conception of peace at any price."

It may be remarked that Polish ignorance in this respect is much assisted by the backing assured from Great Britain and France. And it was probably at the request of these powers that Col. Beck was careful to close no doors to any reasonable compromise of the problems at issue with the Third Reich. On the contrary, he welcomed negotiations with Berlin provided they are conducted in an atmosphere of peace and on a basis of mutual equality.

To this extent, certainly, Col. Beck's speech was an olive branch extended in the direction of the Third Reich. But whether Hitler will seize that olive branch is by no means certain. His demand for the return of Danzig to the Third Reich, and for a strip of territory that would join East Prussia to the rest of Germany, is not in itself unreasonable. The trouble arises from the wholly justified fear that acquiescence would, as in the case of Czecho-Slovakia, lead rapidly to liquidation of Polish independence.

The significance of Col. Beck's speech, therefore, is that it has placed the issues of Danzig and the Corridor in their larger setting. He has made it clear that these Nazi objectives cannot possibly be considered as a thing apart. And in so doing he rendered a most useful service to his nation and to Europe.

The interest of Great Britain and France in the Danzig question, and in the fate of the Corridor, is obviously limited. But these powers are most vitally interested in seeing that the constant element of threat is removed from the relations between Germany and her neighbors. To achieve stability in Europe they are prepared to fight in defense of Poland. And this support is now all the more certain because, in discussing German-Polish relationships, Col. Beck was moderate and peaceful as well as firm.

Irresponsible Spending

Senator Harrison's plea for "radical retrenchment in Government expenditures," in his address before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, preceded by a few hours the vote of the Senate Appropriations Committee to add $381,000,000 to the farm supply bill. The difficulties confronting the economy movement in Congress could scarcely be more pointedly illustrated.

Ever-increasing farm subsidies seem to be taken for granted by the agricultural bloc. It is not enough to grant farmers $500,000,000 per year in the form of "soil conservation benefits," in addition to numerous other benefits through the Department of Agriculture. The committee now adds to this $225,000,000 for parity payments and $113,000,000 to finance the disposal of surplus crops. Instead of rendering any real assistance in solution of the farm problem the AAA subsidies are serving primarily as a base on which to pile vast additional expenditures.

Even if it could be assumed that all of these enormous benefits would ultimately work to the advantage of the farmer, it would remain inexcusable to continue voting new subsidies without regard for the status of the Federal Treasury. But warnings of impairment of credit and bankruptcy, from such men as Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee seems to mean nothing to the spenders. They have ears only for the appeals of their constituents for ever-increasing Federal grants.

If new taxes were proposed to meet these requested outlays, Congress could properly weigh the supposed advantages of parity payments and export subsidies against the certain disadvantages of heavier tax burdens. But the spenders consistently refuse to meet the issue in that candid manner. They plan to finance extravagant measures by putting the Government deeper into debt and leaving to some future Congress the problem of reaping the whirlwind.

This thoroughly irresponsible attitude constitutes one of the gravest dangers threatening the United States in this age of crises. As Senator Harrison said, the time has come for Congress to realize that it cannot drink itself sober. If disaster is to be avoided, legislators must resist the temptation to appropriate funds for every purpose which they believe to be politically desirable. The Government must learn once more to live within its means. And this is only possible by resisting the special benefits demanded by innumerable pressure groups.

A Plea To Congress

The temper of the country's business leaders is reflected in the tone rather than the content of the resolutions adopted by the United States Chamber of Commerce.

In the early years of the Roosevelt regime deep-seated hostility to many regulatory experiments affecting business found vent in sweeping denunciations of Administration policies. There was a conspicuous lack of discriminating, constructive criticism that might have enabled the chamber to exert helpful influence upon the course of legislation. Later the short-sightedness of maintaining an attitude of purely negative opposition was realized, and the chamber began to stress the need for co-operation.

The resolutions adopted this week, on the occasion of the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the chamber, are, as heretofore, a characteristic expression of changing business sentiment. A very favorable impression is created by the absence of any striving for effect and by the specific character of the recommendations. The members appear to have reached a measure of agreement that makes it unnecessary to indulge in evasive or discursive utterances. The prevailing sentiment is certainly unfavorable to the Administration's major policies. But there is a significant absence of sweeping demands for repeal of measures that everybody knows are here to stay.

Typical of this changed attitude is the fact that the chamber offers various helpful suggestions for modification of the labor relations act, together with some less desirable. Last year a resolution was passed demanding outright repeal of the law. It is also worth noting that criticism of the Federal relief system is accompanied by recommendations for reformation of the WPA.

The chamber has also faced the fact that public spending must be curtailed if taxes are to be lowered. Furthermore, no appeals for sweeping tax reductions are made, the resolutions dealing with definite proposals for modifying certain taxes which have an especially hampering effect upon enterprise. Additional evidence of the more realistic attitude taken by the chamber is found in the support given Congressional efforts to modify pay-roll taxes.

The resolutions cover too wide a field to be discussed in detail on their merits. But it can be safely asserted that they are the outcome of hard and sincere thinking about the problems that intimately concern businessmen. In the emphasis placed upon the need for legislative remedies, there is also implicit evidence of a wholly democratic reliance on the intelligence and good will of Congress.

Brains And Beauty

There has been little, if any, disagreement with the contention that woman should be beautiful. But as long as men have kept any record of their thoughts, and probably longer, there has been controversy as to whether women, and particularly women with beauty, should possess brains.

However that may be, the "Beauty and Brains" contest, sponsored by The Post and the American Federation of Government Employes, was closed last midnight, with judging to follow this week. The judges, we should like to point out, are confronted with some delicate problems.

The discussions have, in the past, proceeded along such lines as this: Is it desirable for a woman to have brains, or learning, or wisdom, or all three, or none of these qualities? Oliver Wendell Holmes, a great humanitarian, has said, "The brain women never interest us like the heart women." Many years ago, Euripides exclaimed, "I hate a learned woman. May there never be in my abode a woman knowing more than a woman ought to know." Erasmus contributed the saying that "A wise woman is twice a fool."

The consensus of most of the written and spoken thought seems to be that a woman may have intelligence and wisdom with beauty, but if she has them, for better or for worse, she will probably not air them in an obvious way, but merely use them to her own advantage.

Consequently, though the wise woman will certainly never hide her beauty, the beautiful and wise woman, may very well hide her learning. How, we should like to know, are the judges of the contest going to solve this paradox? Will they give first prize to the beautiful woman who answers their erudite questions, or to the one who can, but thinks it better not to answer them?

A Broad Grouping

"I find it necessary and desirable," said President Roosevelt in his reorganization message, "to group in a Federal Security Agency those agencies of the Government the major purposes of which are to promote social and economic security, educational opportunity, and the health of the citizens of the Nation."

Rumors that Director Robert Fechner is about to resign because he objects to the proposed shift of the independent CCC to the new agency will perhaps stimulate more careful consideration of the merits of the reorganization plan. Certainly, changes should not be accepted uncritically, even though it is now certain that the reorganization plan will automatically become effective in June. Any chance that the proposal would be blocked by Congressional opposition disappeared when the House defeated the resolution of disapproval introduced by Representative Taber.

The President has advanced excellent formal arguments in favor of every one of the contemplated shifts. But one is inclined to suspect that in some cases administrative efficiency has been sacrificed to a passion for logical arrangement. To be sure, that is not true in case of the proposed transfer of the Employment Service from the Department of Labor. For it seems generally recognized that the Employment Service and unemployment compensation must be brought under unified administrative supervision.

The transfer of the National Youth Administration from WPA to the new social security setup is subject to criticism on two grounds. It indicates an intention to make this organization a permanent agency. Furthermore, the shift is likely to emphasize the welfare activities of the NYA at the expense of job training.

The case against the proposed transfer of the CCC rests on different grounds. In theory, the change seems for the better. In practice it may turn out to be for the worse. The mere fact that a competent director of the CCC is dissatisfied with the new arrangement is a serious matter. Since the organization which he heads is one of the New Deal innovations which has been most widely praised, it is an open question whether the loss of independent status ought to be risked for the sake of closer co-operation with educational and health activities.

Apart from the fact that the Office of Education and the Public Health Service are functioning well under their present heads, the expansion of the Government's social service activities seems to warrant a more intimate contact between these agencies and those engaged in fostering other forms of social security. However, it should not be forgotten that the Social Security Board (left intact, strangely enough, though deprived of independent status) is already covering a highly diversified field of activity. It is, for example, concerned with old-age insurance, supervision over State unemployment insurance systems, and various forms of direct relief.

The board itself is still grappling with novel problems and trying to improve its administrative mechanism as it acquires experience. Presumably it will carry on its work much as usual, with a minimum amount of direct control from the new head of the Federal Security Agency.

If the changes do not result in any sudden or extensive modifications of functions, the reorganization need spell no loss of efficiency. But, as in case of the other co-ordinating agencies established by the reorganization decree, everything will depend upon the character and the competence of the man selected to fill the position of chief administrator.

Threnody

From the Chicago Daily News.

O Evanston, thou Athens of America, thou consistory of culture, thou repository of the recondite! Why hast thou dimmed the effulgence of thy erudition, let slip the laurels of thy proud laudation, and made access insuperable to thine acropolis?

Time was, O Evanston, when even thy smallest children rolled the periods of Vergil and Lucretius as easily and neatly as they rolled their marbles; thine adolescents spoke familiarly the language of Theocritus and Pindar, and thy grownups made their bridge bids in alexandrines and hexameters. And why, O Evanston? For the reason that thy public libraries, themselves treasure houses of the antique and the esthetic new, stood open from morn and into eventide.

Eheu, fugacissimus gloriae! For years, now, thy main branch hath been too poor to purchase more than a parcel of the most recent and resurgent books on history, biography, science, politics and law. Alas, only the other day, upon the portals of thy South branch was hung this direful legend: "After May 1, closed Wednesday and Friday at 6. Open Saturday at 1:30. Caused by reduction of tax appropriation."

So henceforth, O Evanston, when the cavernous night envelops thy mansions and arcades, thy little ones will perforce lend their ears to blattings by the radio instead of burying their curly heads in tomes of Ciceronian wonder; thy bigger ones will engulf the deleterious dialogue of the motion pictures, and thy biggest ones will woo the desuetude of ill-fashioned fashionable novels.

The Folk Festival

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing to tell you how much I have enjoyed the performances of the "National Folk Festival." I was there every day and I feel, stranger as I am in your country, that I have learned more about Americans and their ways of living from the earliest days than any studies would have taught me.

I believe that if you had these folk dances and folk songs made into moving pictures it would be a much better and truer picture of your people to send abroad than the dreadful kidnapings and murder films bestowed upon us wherever we go in the world. On my stay over here I have seen that you live a happy, natural life—quite different from the impression one gets through your great advertisements, the moving pictures you send abroad.

I take the opportunity of thanking you for the joy I have had in this festival and shall look forward to what you are sponsoring next.

EMMY ANDERSON.

Splendid Effort

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wonder why you've published no letters favoring the Wagner-Rogers resolution, the proposal to admit to this country a limited number of young children from abroad. I understand that on the basis of a recent poll, the sentiment is overwhelmingly in its favor.

The opposition of many of your letter writers seems to stem from a reaction to a statement by Dorothy Thompson. It's not unnatural to find disagreement with one so prolific, but it is hard to believe that her critics would disapprove of this humanitarian gesture. The number to be admitted is very small, they are to be placed in homes immediately upon arrival, and all financial responsibility will be assumed by those concerned.

The sympathies of many of us are expressed in varied ways, but I venture that if those who urge the exclusion of these children, because we have unfortunates of our own, will look further they will find that the ones willing to help in this instance bear more than their share of responsibility here.

I feel that the splendid effort being made to free these children from a cold living death is no less praiseworthy than was the reception by this country, in the past, of the forebears of many of those who write you now. DAVID WHITE.
Washington, May 3.

The Folk Festival

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although somewhat retarded, I want to commend The Post and its management for the happy conduct of the Folk Festival. It was a colorful and cultural entertainment. Particularly pleasing was the satisfactory seating of colored patrons in the D. A. R. Hall. Those few who attended were not humiliated.

It was the opinion of many that the Hampton Institute performers were the "class" of the Thursday festival. The dance, interpretive of the travail of Negroes throughout the "Middle Passage" during the building of America, was a most impressive number.

Equally effective was the cakewalk number. The grace, gestures and movement of this dance design brought to mind the universally admired shows of Williams, Walker, Cole and Johnson, and Will Marion Cook of the 90s.

Despite the furor created anent the use of the D. A. R. Hall, Negro artists were allowed to perform, and Negroes were able to attend without embarrassment—thanks to The Post. E. B. HENDERSON.
Falls Church, Va., May 2.

Warring Sentences

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of May 3 on the Warring sentences constitutes a challenge to every law-abiding citizen, in general, and to every inhabitant of the District in particular. I wonder if there were any of us who were not shocked by the lightness of the sentences meted out by Justice Laws.

I doubt if there were any professional gamblers, racketeers, or income-tax evaders who did not take heart when Charles and Leo Warring, after three trials prosecuted without stint of the money, walked out of the courtroom free men upon the payment of relatively small fines. I wonder also with what emotion others read on the following day in a newspaper of unquestioned integrity and wide circulation an editorial, not chiding, or merely apologizing for the action of Justice Laws, but in fact extolling it.

I am not a criminologist and consequently do not feel as free as the author of the editorial to generalize about what may or may not effectively prevent crime in the District. I am merely curious to know on what researches, what statistical data, what crimino-psychological investigation, the editorial writer relied when he so blithely informed his readers that judicial restraint in imposing sentence, coupled with other factors, is a more effective deterrent to crime "than severe sentences alone."

Does anyone suppose that the ordinary numbers racketeer, police-fixer, tax-evader, etc., is capable of appreciating the nobility of principle and the fine judicial temperament which dictated Justice Laws' restraint? Does anyone suppose that even if those persons could appreciate such things they would have any reaction other than a sense of relief at the diminishing prospect of severe punishment for their peccadillos? It seems that gentlemen who embark on a life of crime, especially those who indulge in tax evasion, must at some phase of their career weigh the prospect of punishment against the chance of gain, and that the improbability of receiving a severe penalty serves as anything but a deterrent.

Justice Laws appears to have presided over a difficult trial in a commendable manner and his fine disposition of the case was undoubtedly prompted only by his conception of justice and fair play. However justified he may have felt in his own mind, excessive judicial nicety in dealing with mature and hardened criminals does not seem to be an effective way to suppress crime and it is to be deplored that The Post should have appeared to subscribe to such a view. Such judicial restraint does not complement vigorous prosecution by law-enforcement officers, but seems rather to nullify it. SIDNEY SHERMAN.
Washington, May 3.

Fills A Need

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Someone has just given me a copy of the Directory of Educational and Recreational Opportunities in the District of Columbia.

I cannot resist telling you it is absolutely the thing many people have needed. It is a great help and your work in printing it is indeed, philanthropic, you deserve much credit. I am sure a lot of people are going to be helped by it.

'The World Of Tomorrow'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the dedication of the completed League of Nations Building at the New York World's Fair on Tuesday, May 2, the editorial from The Washington Post entitled "The World of Tomorrow" was circulated among the several hundred people present and brought forth high praise. The editor of The Post most accurately states, "There is no American, no matter how critical of the League of Nations, who thinks that its decline has been of any advantage whatsoever to our security or our ideals. In consequence a new attitude, in which conscience may play a certain part, is now apparent."

This attitude is reflected in a tremendously increased interest in the League of Nations Association of the United States, and in the enthusiasm manifested in the League of Nations Building at the World's Fair, which has been sponsored by a representative committee of distinguished Americans.

As was said by M. Joseph Avenol, Secretary-General of the League of Nations, broadcast to the meeting from Geneva:

"It is perhaps a bold thing, in this period of chaos and anguish through which the world is passing, beset with dread lest methods of violence should bring upon it a disastrous war, to set up here a monument to the League of Nations. Yet it is not a rash thing to do. I ask the American people to look upon it as evidence not merely of confidence but of faith in peaceful collaboration among the nations. Without such collaboration, civilization today cannot go on; and that being so, let us not permit the League to perish, even though it stand amid ruin. The graver the world situation, the greater will be the need for it. It will be upheld by our faith and our work."

As chairman of the Washington Committee for the League of Nations Asociation of the United States, may I express our deep appreciation to The Post for its stimulating and understanding editorial.

Another View

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To critics of Prime Minister Chamberlain and Americans who think there is glory in going into war, or who quote, as did your recent correspondent, Agnes Herbert, in The Post of April 22:

"And how can man die better than facing fearful odds,
For the ashes of his fathers and the temples of his gods?

I should like to call attention to the following lines copied from the November, 1938, number of The Poetry Review (London, England):

"An army is a beautiful sight;
But if these uniforms were filled with faceless corpses, demented women,
And the half things without sense
Still lingering in hospitals
And asylums quietly,
So as not to remind us of the last war,
A great deal of our pleasure in the parade
Might be destroyed."

Art Is Long

NOW THAT there is a campaign on foot to remove "Civilization" from its place in the sun, interest has been renewed in the statuary groups on the Capitol steps. We either dig into our memory to recall them (for long familiarity has rendered them inconspicuous) or we go down to Capitol Hill and have a look. There is no mistake about it—in the group under discussion the Indian is doing his best to tomahawk the lady. But civilization being what it is, one can hardly blame him. Of course the companion piece on the other side of the steps should be "Bargain Day on Manhattan" or "Osceola at Fort Marion," or some such subject—but that is beside the point.

Since I happen to be wedded to a man with a mania for research, the history of these statues is an open book, so to speak. From the pages of a pompous and delightful old green volume by a gentleman named Moore, he has unearthed not only bits of information about the figures, but about much of the early history of the Capitol.

The two pieces of statuary were executed by different sculptors, and were placed in their present positions about the first quarter of the last century. The green book does not give the exact date, but related events indicate it to be about 1825. "The Discovery of America" was the work of Persico, an Italian, who was also responsible for the allegorical figures on the tympanum, designed (believe it or not) by John Quincy Adams. The offending Indian is by Horatio Greenough, who also made the peripatetic statue of Washington done up like a Roman Senator. It was moved first in, then outside of the Capitol, and now seems to have met the fate in store for the wayward aborigine.

Mr. Moore tells of the growth of the Capitol, and gives an unforgettable picture of the placcolumns on the portico:

"The twenty-four massive monolithic columns of sandstone, each 30 feet high, which constitute the portico, were placed in position in 1825. They were quarried on an island in Acquia Creek, and transported to Washington in flatboats, which were brought to the foot of Capitol Hill by means of Tiber Creek. Ropes were then attached to the columns, and they were dragged up the hill by long lines of men, and every day many Congressmen were to be seen tugging at the ropes, laughing and shouting like schoolboys."

Considering that the statesmen had not long since received a spanking at the hands of the public, they conducted themselves in a truly sporting manner by this assistance. According to Mr. Moore, prior to 1816 the remuneration for members of Congress was $6 a day, and when the high cost of living in Washington prompted them to pass a bill to raise their compensation to $1,500 a session, there was a hue and cry throughout the country. He quotes an old record, which declared:

". . . 'the whole Nation was shaken to its center; parties were formed and political armies marshaled, and the patriotism of the country was aroused to ebullient indignation at the bare proposition that a member of Congress should dare to take what he thought for what he should eat and drink, or wherewithal he should be clothed, and the liberties of the country were menaced with destruction when Congress ventured to demand the necessaries of life in payment for its thankless services.

Mr. Moore adds that so great was the feeling that Congress, at its next session, repealed the obnoxious bill, and made the compensation $3 a day.

However, Congress managed to appropriate money from time to time to continue building the Capitol, and finally the great dome was added. The bronze figure of the Goddess of Liberty surmounting the top was designed by Thomas Crawford, and it was Jefferson Davis, then Secretary of War, who suggested that the cap should be made of eagle feathers—a fact that has deluded many into thinking that the statue is that of an Indian.

In his inimitable style, Mr. Moore thus tells of the hoisting of the bronze to its place atop the dome:

The body of the statue was raised to the lantern on the dome a few days previous to the 2d of December, 1863, and on that day the head was placed on the body with appropriate ceremony. All the forts around Washington fired rapid salutes as the head of the goddess was carefully hoisted over the vast iron sphere, and when it had reached the summit and was securely fastened to the body, flags were dipped in every public building, and in every encampment in and near the city, and a hundred guns on the District and Virginia hills rang out deep-toned salutations to the glorious emblem of liberty."

Ironically enough, Jefferson Davis was at that same time defending the liberty of his beloved Confederacy. What strange events come about with the passing of a few years! One can imagine his enthusiastic planning, making pencil sketches to convey his ideas to the sculptor, and his pleasure at the model. Before its completion, he was called to lead the tragic destiny of the South, inspired no doubt by his sincere conception of the commands of the goddess on the dome. The lexicographer defines liberty as "the power of choice," and the picture of the bronze figure with the eagle feathers in her cap probably went with him in the way of his choosing.

We, with our twentieth century sophistication, smile at obvious symbolism, and consider ourselves vastly superior because our mode of expression is either brutal and direct, or subtle—depending upon which school we follow. But instead of the melodramatic marble tableau that so thrilled our elders, we have our Wild West movie serials, our pulp magazines. We put a streamlined Liberty on our coins, but the only thrill she brings is when she clinks against another silver lady in our pockets. Our ancestors may be looking askance from their Olympian heights, puzzled and disturbed by the trend of our public decorations.

Fair Enough

Florida Civilization

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 5.—About two weeks ago, in Miami, a woman motorist ran down a colored man while rushing to a hospital to have a chicken bone removed from her throat. She kept on going. A white man who had seen the accident pursued her, and she claimed to be surprised by the news that she had struck the colored man. The man died, and the woman was fined $200 on a traffic charge. The court, however, gave weight to the fact that she was a person of slender means and suspended sentence. The court was really touched.

So ended a life and the law's concern for the victim. However, it may not be claimed that the color of the deceased affected the judgment of the learned court. The local newspapers remarked sharply that this was the third such case of recent date which had been adjusted by a $200 fine. The two other victims were white—or, as G. D. Shaw might prefer to say, pink—persons, and the defendants were required to pay off. Perhaps if the woman driver's victim had been white—or pink—she, too, regardless of her neediness, would have been compelled to pay. But that is a technical difference at most. In a region where the Negro is likely to become a peon if he strays into the bush and, at best, may be impressed into field work at the white man's own price, with a term on the road gang in stripes as the alternative, he is flattered when his demise in a hit-and-run scrape calls for a $200 fine, even though the fine be waived.

Miami Jails Have Uncommon Floors

HAD HE NOT been killed in the traffic he might have been arrested one day for straying where the nice people live, such as the family of Citizen Al Capone or Frank Nitti, Capone's chief of staff, and might have fallen out of his bunk in the police station to die of a fractured skull. They have uncommonly hard floors and uncommonly tippety bunks in Miami, and accidents do happen.

The cases are not related, but there is an interesting sequence from the incident of the hit-and-run killing in Miami to a more recent one in Daytona Beach, in which Lee Snell, a colored taxi driver, was accused of killing a 12-year-old white boy who was riding a bike. Snell was arrested, and a Daytona reporter quoted the chief of police as saying that there was nothing to suggest that the taxi man had been drinking. The time of day—7 in the morning—would oppose such a suggestion, and moreover, all drivers who have had experience in Florida this winter with children on bicycles, some of them riding upright and swaying about the road with their arms folded, will recall moments when they, too, were likely to run down innocents at play.

Mexican Justice For Helpless 'Fugitive'

A DECISION was made to remove Snell to the county jail at Deland for "safe-keeping," and on the way the car in which he was riding with a constable was blocked by another. Two men demanded the prisoner, and the gallant officer, with heroic devotion to duty, yanked the unhappy colored taximan into the road and ordered him to run. Instead of shooting the men himself, according to his duty and the law, he invoked the Cuban and Mexican law of flight for his helpless captive, but claims that he attempted to deflect one shot by grabbing the barrel of one man's gun and throwing it up.

This is the quote from the constable's story as related by a Daytona correspondent:

"As Snell was breaking for the woods one of the men fired a charge which struck him in the leg, breaking it. The Negro slumped on the ground, and the other man walked over and fired several slugs into his body."

Florida Civilization Learning To Creep

SIX DISINTERESTED motorists saw this small irregularity, and the men were recognized on personal acquaintance by the heroic officer, so it seems probable that there will be a lawing of some kind when the fugitives decide to come in.

The case has been listed as a lynching already, but that is obviously incorrect. It was not a mob action, but a private reprisal by the little boy's relatives.

A trial will ensue, but negricide is not a capital offense in Florida, and ten years is a long term for murder, even though the victim be white—or pink. About three years would seem to vindicate justice in the case, for some rebuke seems necessary.

After all, civilization, though it may not actually march, nevertheless has learned to creep in Florida.

Col. Beck's 'No'

By Barnet Nover

Is Europe Turning The Corner?

FOR ALMOST the first time, a small nation has talked back to Nazi Germany and has done so without fear. That is the meaning of Col. Beck's speech to the Polish Parliament Friday. And its significance may prove to be very great. Indeed, there is a possibility that Poland's courageous stand may mark a new turning point in Europe's affairs.

Outwardly nothing has been changed by Col. Beck's rejection of Hitler's demands regarding Danzig and a German-owned passageway between East and West Prussia. Those demands, as Hitler himself revealed in his Reichstag speech, had already been rejected by Poland. What is important is that they were rejected again, this time publicly, and this time in the full realization of the possible consequences.

THERE WAS an ominous note in one of Hitler's references to Poland in the Reichstag address. "Poland, like Czecho-Slovakia a year ago," said the Fuehrer, "believes, under pressure of a lying international campaign, that it must call up troops although Germany on her part has not called up a single man and had not thought of proceeding in any way against Poland . . ."

This was a clear warning to Poland that if she refused to capitulate to Germany's demands, if she took measures to defend frontiers, her fate would be the fate of Czecho-Slovakia.

But that warning the Warsaw government has now decided to ignore. It is willing to negotiate with the Third Reich, but only if Germany's demands are whittled down to reasonable proportions, and only in an atmosphere of peace. In other words, Poland is prepared to make concessions, but not if they mean the destruction of her political and economic independence.

HITLER'S possible course of action has now been narrowed down. He can accept Beck's offer, which previously he had rejected. But to do so would involve a serious loss of face, which the Fuehrer cannot afford. His greatest stock in trade has been the legend of his invincibility. If that legend is now destroyed, his international position would be seriously affected. And such a development might also have dangerous repercussions within Germany itself.

The alternative is to ignore Col. Beck's warning that Poland will fight rather than permit herself to be cut off from the Baltic; Premier Daladier's equally strong warning that France will support Poland, and the British guarantee of Poland's independence. That probably means war.

WILL HITLER fight to regain Danzig and win a passageway across the Polish Corridor? He may. But in that case he will not fight for Danzig or the Corridor, per se. He will fight because with each passing week the possibilities of further territorial expansion by the Third Reich are diminishing; because Germany is today at the peak of her industrial and military power while her opponents are only now beginning to catch up; and because the stresses and strains within Germany are such that if the Third Reich doesn't expand, the Nazi system may explode.

But nations, even dictatorships in a state of desperation, do not knowingly fight against overwhelming odds. The question arises, therefore, whether Germany can so stack the international cards as to have at least an even chance in the event of a general war.

AT THIS POINT two great questions arise.

The first is the potential role of Russia. Litvinoff's resignation has thrown the Russian picture into confusion. But that event has apparently produced in Great Britain a readiness to end the interminable discussions over the precise nature of the proposed Anglo-French-Russian alliance and make that alliance on Russia's terms. Should Russia agree, the weight of power would rest with the antiaggression bloc.

The second question is the efficiency of the Berlin-Rome axis in the event of a general war. About that, nobody can speak with any assurance. But there are increasing indications that Italy is seriously perturbed over the present situation.

She sees herself being drawn into a war over Poland in which she has not the slightest interest. The axis has been useful to Italy, though far more to Germany. But its usefulness has been almost entirely the result of the fact that it could get what either partner was after without war.

Now that Germany is faced by the alternative of backing down, which means a loss of prestige to the axis and a reduction of its usefulness as a blackmailing device, or going to war, Italy is holding back. And so, too, is Japan, whom Germany has been pressing for some time to conclude an offensive and defensive alliance with one or both of the axis powers.

In other words, the world may now see confirmation of the thesis that the only way to break the axis is by a policy of firmness toward both members. In this particular Mr. Beck's speech of Friday is a counterpart to Premier Daladier's speech of some months ago when he definitely rejected the Italian demands regarding Tunis and Djibouti.

The only uncertainty is whether Italy retains any liberty of action at all. If she does, there is every reason to believe she will do everything to avoid actual commitments to go in on Germany's side in the event of a war over Poland.

Immunity Ends With Embassy Job

Employes of foreign embassies have diplomatic immunity from criminal and civil prosecution only as long as their employment lasts, Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey ruled yesterday.

In an eight-page written decision, Judge Casey found Vinard L. Paris, 29, of Takoma Park, Md., former first butler at the Japanese Embassy, guilty of ten traffic law violations, all but one of which occurred while Paris was connected with the embassy.

Paris, who operates a rooming house and attends George Washington University law school, was fined $60.

New Wave Of Loyalty

'Spiritual Rearmament'

THERE ARE pending in Congress some strong bills providing for the deportation of alien communists or other aliens who work against our form of government. The bills arose as a consequence of two events.

First, Secretary of Labor Perkins, who has charge of immigration matters, was cited in Congress for impeachment. The charge against her was that she had not been sufficiently vigilant about deporting alien communists. The charge was heard by a committee of the House (Judiciary). The committee exonerated Miss Perkins.

Without doubt the exoneration was justified. The chairman of the committee, Democrat Hatton W. Sumners, of Texas, is one of the ablest men in Congress—high-minded, judicial in temperament, thoroughly American, free from partisanship in matters affecting the national interest. Had there been reason to impeach Miss Perkins, Mr. Sumners would not have led in exonerating her.

The charge against Miss Perkins was not supported by evidence. Six times the committee report, dealing with all six phases of the charge, used the phrase "there is no evidence," or "no competent evidence." The charge itself was too narrow to justify impeachment, even had there been evidence to support it. The charge dealt, in the main, with only one case—an allegation that Miss Perkins had not been diligent in deporting Mr. Harry Bridges, of the Pacific Coast C. I. O., who was alleged to have, or to have had in the past, communist affiliations. It is said now by some who are disappointed with the outcome that had the charge against Miss Perkins been broadened, had it covered the whole of her six years conduct in the matter of deporting a large number of undesirable aliens, she might have been impeached. But probably not, almost certainly not.

'Additional Views' Given by Minority

THE EXONERATION of Miss Perkins was unanimous, it was signed by all 26 of the committee—16 Democrats and 10 Republicans. A minority of the committee, 10 Republicans, brought in, not a formal minority report, but a statement of "additional views." And if there was complete justification for the exoneration of Miss Perkins, probably there is some justification also for the "additional views," which in part said:

"It is apparent that the Secretary of Labor (and two subordinate officials) have been lenient and indulgent to Harry Bridges in the conduct of his deportation case to an unprecedented extent . . . It cannot escape our severe condemnation . . . The confidence of the people in the proper administration of the laws governing the deportation of aliens, particularly those associated with the extreme radical and communistic elements . . . has been profoundly shaken by the failure promptly, vigorously and impartially to proceed to a final determination of the case."

The second incident that led to the present movement toward a stronger attitude about alien communists was a decision of the Supreme Court. The Court held, in effect, that an alien communist cannot be deported unless he is a member of the Communist Party at the present time. That, of course, leaves it easy for an alien communist threatened with deportation to protect himself by merely resigning from the party. (Incidentally, this Supreme Court decision, partially and indirectly, justified Miss Perkin's attitude in the matter of deporting Mr. Bridges.)

War Of Ideologies Belatedly Recognized

THESE TWO incidents led to a feeling in Congress which in effect says "We're going to find out whether the United States is helpless against alien communists." Out of this sentiment arose the present bills dealing with aliens and deportation. The bills are drastic, and they are strongly supported. One has already passed the House without a dissenting vote.

This sentiment may mark the passing of America into a new phase, an emotion of strong, affirmative loyalty to America, defense of America against foreign ideologies. It is a recognition—long belated—that the war of ideologies is on. If an American (or anyone else) believing in individualism, were found in any of the collectivist countries, especially Russia and Germany—deportation would be the mildest of the fates he might suffer.

But if this new American sentiment is to be effective, it will need to go much farther than mere deportation of aliens who are or have been formerly members of the Communist Party. These are a small and relatively unimportant class. The most determined and able of the communists—alien or naturalized or native—have learned the tactics of avoiding formal enrollment in the party, so as to be able to say, "I am not a communist."

No amount of proscription of definable classes will be enough. Much of the condition that makes America spiritually sick expresses itself through persons who are not affiliated with either of the collectivist ideologies. They are persons who are spiritually indifferent either to individualism as a philosophy or to the American form of government, or both. America, to be saved, needs to experience, in the field of patriotism, an equivalent of what in the field of religion is sometimes spoken of as "spiritual rearmament."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Conduct Of American Foreign Policy

MANY THINGS are being done these days in Washington to reorganize the machinery of government, but there is one part of the machinery about which nothing is being done. Yet it is now the most dangerously defective part of the whole Government mechanism, the part that most urgently needs to be reorganized. This is the mechanism for conducting foreign relations.

The center of the trouble lies in the relation between the President and the two houses of Congress. Under the Constitution they have separate and co-ordinate powers in foreign relations. But obviously they have a joint responsibility. Thus, the President appoints Ambassadors. The Congress must confirm them. The President negotiates treaties. The Senate must ratify them. The President is Commander in Chief of the armed forces. The Congress alone has the power to raise and support armies. The President can break off diplomatic relations. The Congress alone has power formally to declare war. But the President has the power, which Lincoln exercised in April, 1861, to recognize the existence of a state of war even though war has not been formally declared. The President can bring a war to its conclusion. But the Congress must ratify the treaty of peace.

President, Congress Must Team On Policy

IT IS EVIDENT that in conducting foreign relations the two branches of Government are not only co-ordinate but interlocking. It is clear that this mechanism will not work unless the two branches of the Government have access to the same information, are able to consult continuously, and are able to know before either commits itself irrevocably that it has the support of the other. Without a machinery of unbroken consultation, and a confirmed habit of using it, the President and Congress tend to pull apart, to work at cross purposes, each to suspect the other of usurping rights, and to divide the country in those very times of crisis when it is most necessary that the United States should deal with the outer world consistently, firmly, and with dignity.

But no effective machinery of consultation now exists. It is the root of our present difficulties. It is most dangerous. It may have profoundly tragic consequences. The fact is that the two branches of Government, on whose joint action depends the safety of the American people, are so far apart that it might almost be said that they are not on speaking terms. Certainly they are not able to speak to each other with the candor and confidence that should exist among men who have a joint responsibility for the lives, the fortunes, and the honor of the Nation.

CONGRESS and the President are very active about American foreign affairs. They ought to be. The situation throughout the world is more critical than it has been within the memory of any living man. But the fact is that in the face of this situation the Congress and the President are not consulting one another, are not examining the issues together, are not trying with all their power to learn from one another, and to judge together what the United States should do. This is the trouble at the bottom of all the trouble.

It can be corrected if the people want it corrected.

Congress In Dark On Foreign Relations

WHAT IS THE ISSUE, for example, in regard to the neutrality act? In the first instance, it is whether Congress shall fix the rules of neutrality by mandatory legislation or whether the President shall fix them by executive discretion. But why should this issue have arisen at all? Why should the country have to choose between making rigid Congressional rules that may not fit the practical situation and giving to one man unlimited personal discretion?

If it were the established practice of the President to keep the leaders of both parties fully and currently informed, and to act only after consultation with them, there would be no need to choose between cast-iron laws and unfettered personal discretion. The two organs of the Government would be co-ordinated as they were meant to be co-ordinated. Congress would exercise continuous supervision over foreign policy, and the President would be required and would be able to provide Congress continuously with the information that is necessary if Congress is to know what it is doing.

But as things go now, Congress gets its information from the newspapers and from the rumors that circulate in the lobbies. It has no means of knowing from day to day what information is coming to the State Department. It never really understands in advance what the President is doing or why he is really doing it. And at the other end of Pennsylvania avenue, the President deals with Congress at arm's length, passing out scraps of information, hints of his intentions to this visitor or that, knowledge which gets distorted by gossip, sensationalized, misunderstood, at times misrepresented. That is why Congress wants to legislate wholesale, once and for all, rigidly and in generalities, and that is why this President, like almost every other President since Washington, wants to get rid of Congress, and take charge personally.

Sharp Differences On Neutrality Course

BEHIND THE ISSUE of mandatory legislation versus Presidential discretion there has arisen, of course, the much more momentous issue of an active policy versus a passive policy. This is a real issue. There is a real difference of opinion as to whether the best interests of the United States will be served by positive intervention to prevent war, and if war breaks out, by favoring the Anglo-French side, or whether American interests will be served better by a policy of indifference to the fate of Europe, and of non-intercourse with all the nations that may go to war.

But these differences of opinion are being sharpened beyond all reason by the conflict between Congress and the President. It is being made to appear as if the country had to choose between joining the grand alliance and conscripting another army to fight in France and, on the other hand, sealing itself up hermetically and renouncing all its rights, all its interests, all provision for its larger security. Surely, the very essence of a good foreign policy would be to steer this country through the crisis and between the extremes, without running it on to the monster Scylla or into the whirlpool of Charybdis.

That can be achieved only by men of very cool judgment and with very firm purpose, who know what they are doing and know that they have the means to do it. The Congress alone obviously cannot do that. The President alone cannot do it. In an atmosphere of conflict, rivalry, oratory, broadcasts, press interviews, declarations, resolutions, endless debates, hearings, nobody can do it. The wisest men and the greatest statesmen of all time, if they were gathered together, could not do it.

Yet this is what is now in prospect for ourselves and for the world. We are not promised a thorough, loyal, candid, painstaking attempt by Congress and the President to shape American policy in the greatest crisis of modern history. We are promised an interminable debate and agitation, with charges and counter-charges, propaganda and counter-propaganda, all mixed up with domestic policies, and personal grudges, and ambitions for 1940, and Heaven only knows what manner of masked intrigue fomenting the confusion from abroad.

Union Of Factions Declared Needed

THE AMERICAN people deserve something better than that from their Government. They are entitled to be protected against the consequences of so reckless and so irresponsible a method of dealing with issues of life and death. They ought to insist now that before anything else is done the President call in the leaders of both parties and of all factions and come at once to an understanding with them that they will arrange to inform one another and to consult, to receive confidences and to keep them, and thus to discharge together their joint responsibility.

It can be done. It requires no legislation. It is done in England, it is done in France, it is done in every working democracy. It can be done here. All it requires is the will to do it, and the capacity of the men in Washington to rise to the occasion putting aside all little things in order that they may be equal to their immense responsibilities.

Postmasters Told To Avoid Politics

The Civil Service Commission yesterday warned 14,800 postmasters and acting postmasters of the first second and third classes that they are subject to the political activity rule and are "forbidden to take any active part in political management or in political campaigns."

The warning was given because these postmasters were not subject to the political activity rule prior to the act of June 25, 1938, which brought the positions of first, second and third class postmaster into classified civil service.

Such political activity may result in removal, the Commission stated.

'Our Sea' And Duce

By Francois de Tessan

France Won't Yield

Francois de Tessan, member of the French Chamber of Deputies, who arrived in New York this week, is one of the Europeans contributing to the special news commentary service on European developments appearing in Washington exclusively in The Post.

The adhesion of Gen. Franco's government to the anti-Communist pact on March 27, the deliberate delay in the withdrawal of the so-called Italian volunteers, certain movements of troops in Spanish Morocco and in the direction of Tangiers, the visit of a large German naval squadron to the Spanish and Portuguese waters are many reasons for increased uncertainty with regard to the situation in Europe. Those who imagined that after the collapse of the Spanish republic Spain would promptly oust the interpenetration, not to say throw off the tutelage of the totalitarian states, have been obliged to face a whole series of disquieting informations, which have gradually caused them to renounce their illusions.

The fact is that the leaders of Rome and Berlin had endeavored to commit Gen. Franco to a definite system of Mediterranean policy. As soon as they had succeeded in obtaining his signature they proclaimed to the world that this act implied very far-reaching engagements.

Began With Riffs

After waiting a long time Mussolini congratulated himself upon having achieved what he had already planned in 1923. At that moment he had in fact received the Spanish Minister, Primo de Rivera, and had endeavored to draft the outlines of a co-operation designed to counterbalance the influence of France.

Abdel Krim's rebellion having obliged the Madrid government to seek a rapprochement with France in the common interest of both countries, negotiations with Italy were suspended. Resumed in 1928, they culminated in an agreement according to which, in the event of a conflict, the Duce was authorized to establish a military base in the Balearic Islands and to utilize the Spanish ports for his navy. The existence of this secret treaty was denied at the outset, but it has since been proved to have really existed.

In the spring of 1934 Mussolini prepared with the Spanish reactionary leaders the rebellion against the republican regime. He promised effective resistance to those who were organizing the revolt which was designed to further the great Fascist campaign. When, in July, 1936, rebellion broke out in Spanish Morocco he kept his word insofar as from the onset of the disturbances he supplied the rebels with airplanes.

France Intends No Monopoly

With unprecedented violence, Mussolini has launched the slogan "Mare Nostrum" while the whole Fascist press developed the well known theories of a supremacy which it pretends was imperative in the interest of contemporary geography, history and necessities. But the Mediterranean as a "vital space" is at least as essential to France as to Italy.

France, however, excludes no one and aims at no supremacy. She considers that this sea is open to all nations, that she has special rights established by history and primary interests which oblige her to defend her communications with Africa. She has no intention of instituting a monopoly. But she cannot permit anyone to contest her large part in the Mediterranean economy, nor to assign her a secondary role in a region where her contribution to civilization is more important than that of any other country.

France Fully Aware

France is so fully aware that the Mediterranean is a joint property and not a reserved field of operations that she might well take for a motto the words engraved on the Ferdinand de Lesseps memorial at the entry to Port Said: "Aperime terram gentibus." (The land should be opened to all nations.)

Let it be said the conceptions of Italian imperialism and the policy of the axis—even if openly and fully supported by Fascist Spain—will be opposed by France as a whole, French Africa and the French home country. The Mediterranean statute will not be modified on the basis of subversive theories; and if, unfortunately, the forces had to be measured, the French people would counter any attack together with its allies, its great wealth of material resources, its undaunted military courage and its whole strength of spirit.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Abandoned by Husband, in What She Believes to Be Bigamous Union, Wife Asks How to Learn Truth

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for several years and during all that time (except for the first few months), my husband has nagged constantly and nothing I could do would please him. Also, during all that time he seemed afraid of something and would not confide his worries in me. He was restless and always wanted to keep on the go, never settling in any one place. Then, too, he would never take me to visit his mother (who lives in another State), even though we were within a few miles of her home on several occasions.

Last winter, while dining in a restaurant, we were approached by a man from his home town, who addressed my husband by another name and talked to him a few minutes. When I questioned him later, he admitted he had changed his name before he met me. From different things he said, I came to the conclusion he had been married before and this, too, he admitted. When I asked to see his divorce papers, he said he had destroyed them and when I asked where he had obtained the divorce, he told me. But several weeks later, he named a different place.

About this time he received a letter from his mother saying that she had heard he was married again, but not to bring his wife home, as it would be best not to come back there as a married man. Soon afterward, we went to visit my family and after we arrived, my husband disappeared. I would like to know how I can find out if he was ever divorced from his first wife.

BEWILDERED.

Uncovering the Facts

DEAR BEWILDERED: The ambiguously worded letter of warning from the man's mother—to the effect that it would be best for him "not to come home as a married man"—affords circumstantial evidence that his first marriage has not been set aside, and that he is committed to a bigamous union with you. If such should be the case, it is reasonable to assume that his mother would be willing to co-operate with you to the utmost in bringing the situation to order with a minimum of notoriety. Therefore, I suggest that you turn first to her for the information you seek.

Ask her pointblank, by letter, whether it is true—as you have reason to believe—that your present marriage to her son is invalid by virtue of the fact that he was never divorced from his first wife; and say that if it is true, you must know in order to do what you can to set the matter right. Assure her, in all sincerity, that whatever information she gives you will be held in strict confidence, and used only for the purpose of securing an annulment of the second contract, and not with the idea of prosecuting your husband for bigamy.

If she confirms your suspicions (as I imagine she will, if she knows the truth and is frank to admit it) your next step should be that of enlisting legal representation for the purpose of securing the annulment aforementioned. If, however, she fails to reply, or professes ignorance of her son's entanglements, you can still get at the facts by the legal approach. That is to say, a local attorney, acting for you, could uncover the truth through negotiating with a lawyer in the man's native community. The latter could go over court records and learn when your husband was married and when (if ever) divorced.

Supposing yours is a bigamous union, don't make the mistake of believing—as some women in your circumstances might—that because you were never legally married, it is not necessary for you to dissolve the fraudulent contract by legal means. Your status must be adjudicated before you would be free to marry again. The situation must be brought to the attention of the court and clarified. But these are matters in which an attorney can best advise you. Since your husband has abandoned you, after several years of unhappy marriage lived in shady circumstances, I take it for granted that you have no intention of trying to regularize the relationship and remain bound by it.

There is a possibility, of course, that your husband is "wanted" (as the phrase goes) for nonsupport of minor children, or for being in arrears in alimony payments—and that his strange behavior, change of names, and his mother's warnings, do not mean that he has committed bigamy. But for you own sake, it is imperative that you find out what disturbing factors in his background are threatening your security.

My advice to you is to take this problem to the Legal Aid Bureau, 1409 L street northwest, telephone NAtional 8674. If you are without funds, wholly dependent upon your family's benevolence for support, this bureau (being a social agency) will represent you free of charge. Or if you are in a position to pay a nominal fee, you will be referred to an equally able source of assistance.

Artichoke Eating Is Simple if You Know How

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

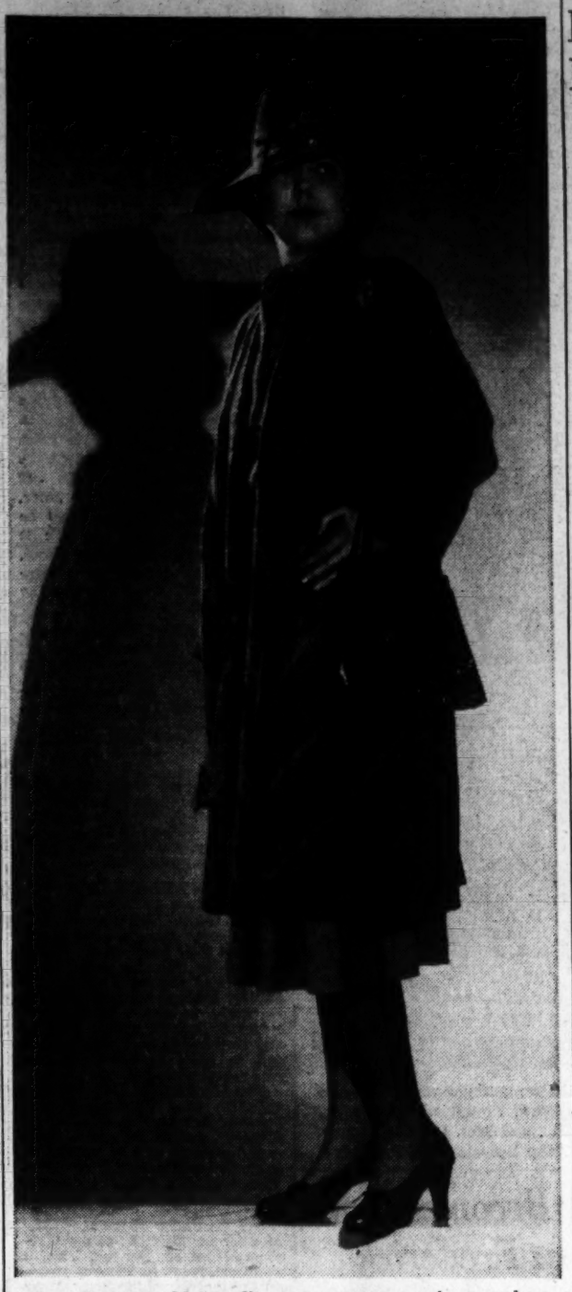
THE FRENCH ARTICHOKE is a thistle-like vegetable with a pronounced characteristic that will bear watching. Some people are floored when confronted at a dinner with an artichoke—they don't know how to eat it. You pull out a leaf, dip the end in melted butter, extract the soft part with the teeth, then discard the remainder. Do the same with all the leaves, cut the choke center and eat the heart with a fork.

Special dishes with a place to set the artichoke, a well for the butter or sauce, and a space to park the mangled leaves are available in the shops, and greatly simplify the serving.

Artichoke Preparation

Allow 1 artichoke for each person. Cut off the stem close to the bottom so the artichoke will stand upright. Remove a few of the coarsest outside leaves, watching out for worms. Use scissors to cut the sharp points off the remaining leaves, cutting down about ¾-inch from the top of each leaf. Robbing the leaves of their points makes the eating much easier on the fingers. Scrub well and soak ½ hour in cold salted water. Drain. Pour on enough boiling water to float them, adding 1 tablespoon salt for each quart of water. Cover, and boil until a fork can be easily stuck into the bottom or the artichokes are tender. Drain thoroughly, and place upright on plates.

Diva Favors Distinctive Colors



Rose Bampton, Metropolitan opera soprano who sang here recently, is one of the many smart women this spring who have selected gray as a basic color scheme. She poses (above) in a distinguished plaid swagger coat in two tones of gray, sprinkled with a dash of coral. Her simple gray sheer-wool frock beneath and her coral-colored ascot pick up her color harmony as do her gray felt hat, alligator bag and gabardine shoes

Your Figure Madam

Developing Muscular Girdle Averts Spread Of Middle Age; Slumping in Chair Bad

STARTLING as it may seem, age has little to do with the middelage spread. It's the combined force of gravity and habit you're up against! Standing as we do, in a more or less upright position, the weight of the organs tugs downward and a trim front line depends entirely on your muscular girdle. When these important muscles lose tone and relax, gravity causes a bulge—and you lose your figure!

Before we go into the matter of the exercises that will keep the muscular girdle strong, however, let's check up on your everyday habits and see if you are heading toward the middle-age spread because of something you do over and over without thinking of its effect on your figure.

Don't Slump in Chair

If you slump inside your girdle instead of using your good muscles as you sit, stand and walk, you are certainly slipping. When you sit in a chair, press the buttocks right against the back of the chair to contact the front abdominal muscles and strengthen them. Slumping down and sitting in the middle of the back pushes the organs out and weakens the muscles. In standing, the upward lift of the trunk should originate in the lower abdominal wall and this region should not only appear flat and firm, but the continual upward pull in standing, sitting and walking will serve to increase the efficiency of your girdle. The more the muscles are used, the stronger the girdle gets.

Eating habits sometimes foster a middle-age spread. You may not eat too much but you may eat too much at one time. For example, you might skip both breakfast and lunch, but if you had an enormous evening meal, the stomach—which is a muscular organ—would stretch to accommodate all that food. The more the stomach stretches, the more space there is between the muscle strands and the more pronounced the bulge.

Don't Drink at Mealtime

Drinking too much water with the meal has the same effect. If you gulp down a couple of big glasses of water, plus a cup of tea or coffee, you cannot expect to keep streamlined. Do not drink water with the meals or immediately afterward. That is a rule followed by many of the movie stars—and look how streamlined they are! But drink plenty of water between meals. You need it.

When the great front group of muscles is allowed to relax, the figure stretches in all directions and all your good habits cannot offset the lack of muscle tone. If this has already happened to you, get busy. Before you can have a trim slim figure, these muscles must be restored to tone, and next week we will take up some of the exercises which most promptly banish the middle-age spread.

Height Gives Fashion Edge, Diva Asserts

Rose Bampton, Five Feet Nine, Gives Tips For the Tall Girl

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

"IF YOU'RE 5 feet 9 inches tall, glory in your altitude. Never cringe to belittle yourself."

Heed this counsel the next time you look down upon "the cute little women" of your acquaintance and remember that your lofty cause has just been backed by a personable young woman second only in stature to Mrs. EleanorRoosevelt. Your adviser is Rose Bampton, Metropolitan Opera singer, 5 feet 9 in her stocking feet, who was in Washington recently to sing before the Congressional Club.

MARSHALL ADAMS

The very height which caused Miss Bampton to cry herself to sleep when she was sweet 16 is netting satisfactory results now. The distinguished young soprano is the proud winner of last year's Fashion Academy award of "Best Dressed Woman in Opera."

Gangly Girl

Miss Bampton's experience in fashion co-ordination might be used to advantage by the tall woman of small income. She volunteered this encouragement: "None of the girls I knew when in my teens were as tall as myself, and worse yet, none of the boys. I always felt out of place and gangly, not realizing that self-possession and assurance of being quietly and appropriately groomed are great beauty aids. Now I know that height is a virtue to be cherished by the woman in business or public life."

Miss Bampton's clear gray eyes and unusually white teeth sparkled as she listed her pet fashion assurances for the woman of height. "Current styles are kind on the tall girl," she said. "She can carry handbags as big as satchels, and I know I, personally feel better proportioned if my reptile or fabric bag is roomy and imposing. Big hats and wide brims can't be worn by a small woman, but they are life savers to the tall girl now that summer is approaching. The seven-eighths length coat works magic at breaking down an overdose of height—or weight. Ascots, multiple-stranded necklaces, standing Johnny collars or fur scarfs are throat huggers which do wonders for the tall girl with a long neck and broad shoulders. Even parting one's hair in the middle cuts height.

Cool, Calm Colors

Keying up your personality and posture and keying down an overpowering height is advocated by Miss Bampton. She urges large or tall women to dress on the more quiet side, not necessarily conservative, but with a relaxed reserve of taste. She personally feels better in cool, calm colors, such as beige and sage green and gray.

"Gray looks as though it will enjoy a rosy future," remarked Miss Bampton. "It is very chic this season, and adds unexpected flattery to women of almost every complexion—BUT—it must be combined with a contrasting tone. Salmon, royal blue or any high pastel lifts a gray suit or frock out of its rut."

Miss Bampton's experience as a fashion-wise air traveler dates back six years, when she flew in an open cockpit ship from Halifax to Prince Edward Island and had only a fur flying suit to keep her from freezing to death before her concert appearance the same evening. This encounter fortified her for the constant air travel she engages in now from coast to coast for personal appearances. Her tip to other women travelers is: "Take as little clothing as possible. Concentrate on only finest quality suits or ensemble. Fine woolens or silks hold up and look better after traveling far."

Committee Meeting Log

3:10 P. M.

Chairman—It's getting so late and we've got so much to do. I do wish Mrs. Hazey would come—oh! Here she is now!.

Mrs. Hazey—I'm sorry I'm late—

Mrs. Bounce—What a DARLING hat!

Mrs. McAddle—It's the sweetest thing I ever saw!

Hostess—Honestly, did you ever see anything like the hats this year?

Chairman—I simply can't wear them.

Mrs. Bounce—Another thing that's driving me crazy are these open-toed shoes. I don't think they look cute at all.

Mrs. Hazey—Oh, I like them.

Mrs. Bounce—I think they're downright vulgar—that is some of them. Now, of course, those like Mrs. McAddle has on are not extreme. I didn't mean those—

Mrs. McAddle—Well, I simply couldn't find anything else—

Hostess—Oh, I want to tell you what happened to me buying shoes—"

3:30 P. M.

Chairman—Girls, I hate to interrupt but we're all in a hurry and the annual luncheon is just a week from tomorrow. Now the first thing we've got to decide on is the menu.

Mrs. Bounce—Wait, we ought to decide on the decorations first.

Mrs. Hazey—Yes, and don't forget the favors.

Mrs. McAddle—Oh say, I saw some of the cutest things at a luncheon I went to yesterday. Now the napkins were all folded to represent teddy bears—

Chairman—Was that the Bigsbee luncheon?

Mrs. McAddle—Yes.

Mrs. Hazey—Oh were you there! Who else did she have?

Mrs. McAddle—Well, there were about 12. Let's see—

Mrs. Bounce—What did she have?

Mrs. McAddle—Well now, let's see . . . the first course was a fruit cup . . .

3:50 P. M.

Chairman—Girls, we simply MUST get down to business. I've got to get away early.

Chorus—So have I!

Chairman—Where were we now? Oh, yes, the menu.

Mrs. Bounce—No, we decided to decide on the decorations first.

Mrs. Hazey—Still if we planned the menu first we could carry out the food colors in the decorations.

Mrs. McAddle—No, I think we ought to carry out the decoration colors in the food.

Mrs. Hazey—Well, I think it would be nice to have the whole color scheme in purple since the King and Queen are coming—

Mrs. McAddle—Oh, are THEY coming to our luncheon?

Mrs. Hazey—No, I just meant they were coming to this country—Say though, why don't we invite them?

Chairman—They won't be here in time.

Mrs. Bounce—I'm dying to see her.

Mrs. McAddle—Do you think she's pretty?

Chorus—Well, I think—

4:20 P. M.

Chairman—Say, now, we've only got a few minutes left and we haven't decided anything.

Mrs. McAddle—Well, I thought we had decided to have everything in purple.

Mrs. Bounce—But we can't very well get purple food.

Mrs. Hazey—What about raspberry sherbet.

Mrs. Bounce—I don't like raspberry sherbet.

Mrs. Hazey—It's all in the way it's made.

Chairman—Girls, do you know it's nearly 4:30 o'clock?

Mrs. Bounce—Say, I've got to go! Mr. Bounce'll have a fit!

Chairman—Well now, let's get right down to business and decide on the decorations—

Hostess—I'm sorry to interrupt but the rolls are nice and hot now—

Chairman—You don't mean you've gone to all that trouble!

Hostess—Oh really, I haven't anything—just some hot rolls and chicken salad—

Mrs. McAddle—You shouldn't have done that!

Hostess—And then I made some little chocolate Brownies—

Chairman—Well, maybe we'd better recess the committee and meet later. Now what day can everybody come?

Hostess—Just a minute. Now who wants coffee and who wants tea? Oh yes, and I've got some hot chocolate.

Teach Your Dog New Tricks

IT'S A REAL pleasure to teach smart tricks to your dog. Easy, too, once he has learned to "read" your voice. Use your most serious tone to tell him he is doing wrong, or that you demand obedience. Speak happily to let him know he's doing what you want him to, that you are pleased with him.

When teaching your dog the "Jump Through" trick, ask a friend to help you. Have him make a "loop" close to the ground with his arms, fingers touching and palms up.

Now you slip one end of Doggy's long leash through the "loop" and pull him close to it. Holding a tasty morsel to tempt him, you say firmly, "Jump through!" When he obeys, give him a friendly pat and the tidbit.

Soon he'll jump through at your command—without your having to use a leash.

Other clever tricks he learns easily, too—soon has a whole repertoire, "Dig it up!" "Roll over!" "Sit up!" "Shake hands!" And are you proud of him!

Naturally, he'll be more alert, learn faster if he's in the pink of condition. Keep him that way with right food, proper grooming, attention to his doggish ailments.

Police Develop Technique for Guarding Royalty Many Detectives in Plain Clothes in Crowds

New York, May 5.

WITH THE rush of royal folk and other distinguished personages, because of the World's Fair, attention is focused on the truly magnificent police arrangements of this city to receive and safeguard them during their stays in our muddled midst. Believe me they are something to witness.

ALICE HUGHES

Usually we take our excellent cops as necessary evils—or, in an emergency, blessings. But when they pull themselves together to meet and guard a royal highness, or even the President of the United States, they're wonderful. Remember, this technique of police work in a great city is highly developed. I was reminded of this a few minutes ago when I noted a lot of police activity in my own Murrayville neighborhood. Slightly befuddled by the howdy-do of the Fair and all, I asked the reason for the rush of cops. I was reminded that Crown Prince Olav of Norway, with his spouse, the Princess Martha, were on their way uptown after the usual reception at City Hal.

This is the procedure. The main highway is suddenly and thickly sprinkled with cops. Cars are wooshed off. Fly cops in plain clothes haunt the sidewalks and my old man says it is practically suicide to reach in a pocket for a hanky. Suddenly the constant roar of traffic fades to a thick hush. Then, with a whine of sirens from the motorbikes of coppers, the visitors are rushed by to their next destination—probably a luncheon at the Bankers' Club. It all happens so fast that the show is over before a foul assassin or a mere crackpot could pull a pistol and go bang-bang.

Believe me, my turban is off to our cops, at such a time. The United States holds nothing more adroit and perfect, in public guarding, than the arrangements for the safe reception and passage of the President of our country. I only wish you could stand here with me on Murray Hill and see the show. It makes the movies look silly and trivial. It's wonderful.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Spring eating and—pardon me—drinking zoom into high this week. All the local snuggeries are shined up for residents and visitors, the public eating here is at its usual high standard, which is very high indeed, and any landlord who has a few square feet of sidewalk in front of his place sets up a bridge table and announces "Michel Angelo's Sidewalk Cafe." Lots to eat and—excuse me—drink here, and a lot is very nice, too . . .

Cabinet and Military Chiefs Greet the Somozas at Dinner

Only 2 in Company of 54 Guests Have No Official Connection With Visitors' Retinue or Branches of U. S. Government

A DAY OF POMP and circumstance centering about the arrival yesterday morning of the President of Nicaragua and Senora de Somoza was climaxed last evening by a state dinner at the White House.

The guests included, besides the dignitary's retinue, several Cabinet officers and high ranking officials of the Army and Navy. Only two in the company of 54 had no official connection either with the White House or other departments of the government.

All the best plate was brought out and the long table in the dining room was decorated with vases of red tulips, white lilac, spirea and maidenhair fern.

Miss Lillian Somoza, daughter of the honor guests, who attends Gunston Hall here, was present at the dinner, as was Dr. Manuel Cordero Reyes, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Nicaragua, who accompanied the President to Washington.

The American guests were headed by the Vice President and Mrs. Garner, who break their "no dining-out" rule only for such state occasions as dinner at the White House. Others present were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle, the Speaker of the House and Mrs. Bankhead, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, the Attorney General, Frank Murphy; the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, the Secretary of Commerce, Harry Hopkins, and the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins.

Senator Pittman Among the Guests

Senator Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, was present with Mrs. Pittman. The former chairman, Senator William E. Borah, and Mrs. Borah were also among the guests. Others in the company were Representative Charles A. Eaton, the Chief of Staff of the Army and Mrs. Malin Craig, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. William D. Leahy, the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union, George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol of the State Department; the former Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. Hoffman Philip, Stephen T. Early, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Miss Marguerite LeHand, Mrs. James M. Helm and Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson.

Col. Charles B. Elliott and Capt. Ernest L. Gunther, American Military and Naval aides to the President; his Nicaraguan aides, Lieut. Octavio Sacasa and Lieut. Pedro Nolasco Romero; Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, Capt. Robert E. Hill and Lieut. James J. Winn rounded out the dinner party.

Small Luncheon At White House

The dinner followed a busy day in which the Nicaraguan President and his wife had laid a wreath on Washington's Tomb at Mount Vernon and on the Tomb of the Unknown Solidier at Arlington. Immediately following their arrival a few minutes after noon at the White House, they had received the chiefs of the diplomatic missions and their wives. Then they sat down to a small luncheon at the White House.

As is customary at official dinners at the Executive Mansion, a musicale followed last evening. Senorita Enya Gonzales, soprano, and Stephen Hero, violinist, divided the program, with Carlo Edwards and Collins Smith as accompanists. Senorita Gonzales' numbers included arias from "Madame Butterfly" and "La Boheme," and Mr. Hero played a polonaise by Winiawski, the "Ave Maria" of Schubert-Wilhelmij, and several other selections.

To Be Feted at Reception Tonight

After spending the night at the White House, the distinguished visitors will leave this morning for the Nicaraguan Legation, where they will remain until next Thursday, when they go to New York. The many festivities planned in their honor include a reception to be given tonight at the Pan American Union by the Minister and Senora de De Bayle. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull will give a luncheon in their honor tomorrow at the Carlton Hotel. Monday the President will visit Congress and do some other sightseeing and the following day he will make a tour of the University of Maryland. The president of the university will fete him and his party at luncheon.

Wednesday the President will leave at 9 a. m. for the Marine Barracks at Quantico, where a review will be staged in his honor. President Somoza will return to Washington in time to attend a luncheon to be given that day in his honor by the governing board of the Pan American Union. The following day, Thursday, he and his party will leave at 11:45 a. m. for New York, where they will be at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Mrs. Vandegrift Entertains At Luncheon

Mrs. Alexander A. Vandegrift, wife of Col. Vandegrift, of the Marine Corps, entertained at luncheon yesterday at their home in Foxhall Village.

Guests included Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of Maj. Gen. Holcomb, Commandant of the Marine Corps; Mrs. James Breckenridge, of Quantico; Mrs. Ralph Mitchell, who has recently arrived from the West Coast; Mrs. Leo D. Hermle, Mrs. Holland Smith, Mrs. Frankline A. Hart, Mrs. Daniel Boone and Mrs. W. P. T. Hill.

Luncheon Given Senora de Munilla

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Cuban Military Attache, was the guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday given at the Hay-Adams House by Miss Anna Wolcott Archibald. The guest of honor was gowned in black with sliver fox furs, and the hostess wore black with a green and white print scarf.

Among those who attended were Senora de Crespo, wife of the First Secretary of the Ecuadorean Embassy; Senora de Martinez Amores, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Matilde D. Boone, and Mrs. Mattie Porter.

18th Annual Virginia Gold Cup Races to Be Held Today in Warrenton

ALL ROADS LEAD to Warrenton today, where the Virginia Gold Cup Association is holding its eighteenth annual race meeting, with four races to be run during the afternoon, beginning at 2:30.

Feature event of the day is the third race, for the Gold Cup, a timber race of 4 miles across country. Favorite among the nine entries is Black Sweep, the 6-year-old gending which has been such a sensation in the hunt country this spring.

BLACK SWEEP was hunted, trained and run under the name of Turner Wiltshire, noted horseman and former steeplechase rider of Middleburg. At the hunt race meeting two weeks ago, this horse won over the best timber toppers of the country. Black Sweep was purchased a few days ago by Mrs. Frank M. Gould, of New York, who already has two legs on the beautiful gold cup, which has been won twice by her horse, Ostend. As Ostend will not be able to run today, and she is anxious to win the cup for keeps, Mrs. Gould decided to acquire Black Sweep. She is also entering Postman Home.

OTHER ENTRIES are Kingsland, owned by Turner Wiltshire; Music Mountain, owned by Mrs. Eva Stewart Spilman; Or Else, owned by W. F. Cochran, jr.; Walter Wicks' Deflation; Comonhome, owner, J. W. Y. Martin; C. O'Donnell Lee's Arithmetic, and Captain Bill, owned by G. A. Laing.

The first race of the afternoon, the Fauquier Plate, has 10 entries; the second, the Virginia National, has eight entries, and the last race of the day, the Warrenton Hunt Cup, has seven entries.

WARRENTON IS FULL of racing fans here to enjoy all that goes on today. Last night Mr. and Mrs. George Cutting gave a gay party at their home where horses entered in the big race were pooled and auctioned off to the highest bidder. The party broke up early as there were many riders in today's events present, and they had to have their night's rest in order to put their best foot foremost today.

Miss Mary Selden Kennedy will entertain at a luncheon at the home of her mother, Mrs. A. K. Kennedy, before the races. Several diplomats will be present at a similar party to be given at Viewtree, the home of Oscar Crosby.

Mrs. L. Victor Froment, widow of a former M. F. H. of the Warrenton Hunt, and her son, J. North Fletcher, recently elected president of the Warrenton Horse Show Association, have with them for the week-end several friends from Baltimore and Camden, S. C., for whom they will entertain at luncheon before the races. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Abbott and Mr. and Mrs. Carl J. Schmidlapp, of New York, are among the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill, at Clovelly over the week-end. Mr. Winmill is vice chairman of the Gold Cup committee and one of the original members. He and his wife entertained at a luncheon yesterday.

The Misses Virginia and Jane Calvert and George and Alex Calvert will entertain at luncheon today, and the Warrenton Country Club will be the scene of a similar party for 20 to be given by Miss Virginia Bowman.

President and Senora de Somoza will return to Washington on or about May 18, to spend another day here. They will then leave for San Francisco, where they will embark June 1 for home.

Uruguayan Protegee Addresses A. A. U. W.

Miss d'Arce Discusses Evolution of Women in Her Country as Holder of Association's Latin-American Fellowship

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Proof of the value of the Latin-American fellowship of the American Association of University Women was afforded members of the Washington branch last night when they were addressed by Miss Laura d'Arce, of Uruguay, who holds the award this year. Miss d'Arce spoke at a dinner in her honor at the clubhouse, discussing "The Evolution of Women in Uruguay," and answering questions as to her study of methods of handling juvenile delinquency in this country.

She was introduced by Mrs. David Wing, headmistress of Madeira School and chairman of the fellowship for which an endowment is being raised by the Washington branch. Among honor guests was Dean Margaret Morriss, of Pembroke College, Brown University, who is national president of the A. A. U. W.

Others included Mrs. Ruth Tryon, secretary to the fellowship endowment committee; Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court; Judge Annabel Mathews, Mrs. Elizabeth Shirley Enochs and Miss Elsa Castendyck, of the Children's Bureau; Mrs. John Donaldson, chairman of international relations for the Washington branch; Mrs. Glenn Swiggett, who was one of those responsible for establishment of the Latin-Frank fellowship and Mrs. Frank Smith, chairman of hospitality for the branch.

Theories Carried Out Practically

Miss d'Arce said that in her year in the United States she has been impressed with the practical application in this country of theories regarding crime prevention and the handling of juvenile delinquents—theories which are accepted in Uruguay as well as in the United States but have not been carried out there as here. The new philosophy is that responsibility for crime rests not only with the individual but with the home and the community where criminal tendencies have been fostered. On this basis, prevention and cure go hand in hand, she pointed out.

She also commented on the enthusiasm with which officials handling problems of delinquency in this country approach the problem. Uuruguay, with rapidly growing cities and increased immigration, can learn much from the experience of this country, she said.

Uruguay Gives Rights to Women

Miss d'Arce, in speaking of her own country, said women there have the franchise and the same rights to hold office and avail themselves of free education as men but that, by marriage, they lose certain civil rights. Much protective legislation for women in industry has been enacted in Uraguay and, under the children's code, the state sees to it that the father of a child born out of wedlock contributes to its support.

The educational system is differently divided there than here, she explained, with eight years comprising the elementary course and six years the secondary, four of which are devoted to general academic training and two to specialization for a bachelor degree. This, she considers an advantage. All education is free including that for the professions and as a result, there are more women engineers, architects, lawyers and physicians in Rruguay in proportion to its size than in any other south American country, she said.

Nurses to Meet

A joint meeting of the District of Columbia Graduate Nurses Association and the League of Nursing Education will be held at headquarters of the American Red Cross, Monday, at 8 p. m. Olivia Bendelari Airplane Artist, Visits Sister Here

Miss Olivia Bendelari, who is here from New York, spending the week-end with her sister, Miss Mary Bendelari, has a "one-man" exhibition of water colors of airplanes at the Smithsonian this month. There are 30 or more pictures in the collection, several of famous planes and all done with fidelity to the minutest detail, characteristic of an engineer's drawing.

Miss Bendelari, who recently gave a series of lectures on her work before clubs in Middle Western cities, is a pioneer among women airplane artists. Her interest in painting and flying go hand-in-hand. Her sister, Mrs. Malcolm McAlpin, owns and flies her own plane and Miss Bendelari is a student pilot. She is remaining over the week-end.

One of her interesting experiences was learning that a friendly "mechanic" who offered to take her back from Roosevelt Field, on Long Island, when she had missed her bus after sketching a plane, was "Red" Corrigan.

Mrs. Charles Demonet was re-elected president of the American Women's Legion yesterday at its annual meeting and luncheon held in the Chinese Room of the Mayflower Hotel. She is serving her third term as president of the organization, being elected for the second year in succession and having served before in the early years of its history.

The American Women's Legion was formed in March, 1919, before the American Legion was organi-ed or there was any thought of an American Legion Auxiliary. It now has six units in Washington, all that remain of the 30 which were active in various States before the auxiliary was formed. The former members in many cases have gone into the auxiliary and some of the Women's Legion members belong to both organizations. The latter's work is restricted to the aid, comfort and relief of the disabled or needy former service men of the World War and their families.

Among the founders were Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis, first president who is still a member of the George Baldwin McCoy unit; Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, Mrs. William Finley and Mrs. Alice Mosely.

The legion is carrying on the work among veterans at Mount Alto Hospital which was begun before the hospital came under the supervision of Veterans' Administration. Two of the members, Mrs. James Easby-Smith and the late Mrs. Walter I. McCoy were responsible for the request that a sentry be placed at the Tomb of Unknown Soldier.

It was decided at yesterday's business meeting to change the by-laws to include two classes of membership, active and associate so as to admit women inelegible for active membership as associates who may join in the work being done.

Among special guests yesterday were Mrs. Amos A. Fries, a former member who is active in patriotic work; Mrs. William Sherman Walker, executive secretary of the American coalition with which the legion works closely, and Mrs. Augusta Landis, of the Veterans' Administration.

Healer Pleads No Defense in Mail Fraud Case

Mrs. Rosalyn Randle, who lately was convicted of posing as a health expert to get money by false pretenses, yesterday abandoned her denial of charges of using the mails to defraud and threw herself on Justice Adkins' mercy.

Her plea of nolo contendere, the justice told her, was the same as pleading guilty to all eight counts of the mail fraud indictment. She is liable to a maximum sentence of 43 years.

Mrs. Randle was convicted after a trial of nearly a week of getting $500 on her claim that she could help a brilliant college boy get rid of a suicide complex. The youth testified he had no such complex.

Carroll Bailey Is Given 4-24 Months as Numbers Boss

Justice Adkins Sentences Him to 'Limit' In Jail, but Spares Him $10,000 Fine On Plea He Must Care for 2 Children

Carroll Bailey yesterday was given "the limit"—4 to 24 months in jail—for having bossed a Washington numbers racket, but Justice Adkins spared Bailey the possible $10,000 fine after hearing how he had forfeited nearly $30,000 since "the law caught up with him."

Justice Adkins commented that Bailey was the first numbers game backer to face his court for sentence. Previous convictions have been of small-fry writers and other henchmen.

Two Children to Care For

Bailey interrupted his trial last week to plead guilty of criminal conspiracy to violate the numbers law. Accepting the plea, Assistant District Attorneys Heflin and Tarver dismissed several specific charges of running the numbers game.

Attorney Charles E. Ford told Justice Adkins Bailey had to pay a Baltimore lawyer $10,000 for defending him in the income tax case which tripped up his racket. Ford said Bailey then paid $19,000 on the tax, a $5,000 fine and had to serve four months in jail for tax dodging.

Ford pleaded that Bailey be shown mercy because he had two small children to care for.

Aide Also Sentenced

"I would like a chance to make good," Bailey, who cried as he pleaded guilty last week, told Justice Adkins.

Horton S. Grinder, who pleaded guilty with Bailey, was given 4 to 12 months. Leonard D. McKay, another of the Bailey gang to plead guilty, will be sentenced later.

Va. to Start Special Audit Of Jail Fees

Price Authorizes Study of Accounts Of Sheriffs, Clerks And Trial Justices

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 5.—State-trained auditors have been authorized by Gov. Price to make a detailed investigation of the cost of dealing with lawbreakers in Virginia in a renewal of the attack on one of the older problems of the Old Dominion—the jail.

The Governor agreed to the employment of 24 special auditors, who will be trained for their task under State Auditor L. McCarthy Downs for a two-week period before they launch a study of fees received by Sheriffs, court clerks and town sergeants.

Gov. Price explained that the outside auditors were being employed for the task in order to insure its speedy accomplishment.

It cost the State $1,216,555 in fees and the per diem allowance to localities for the care and feeding of prisoners during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938. This represented an increase over the $1,158,568 paid out for similar charges in the preceding fiscal year, records in the comptroller's office showed.

The audit, which will include the accounts of trial justices, city sergeants, sheriffs and court clerks, is expected to be completed in three or four months.

Hill Area Combed For Five Fugitives From Warren Jail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Front Royal, Va., May 5.—Still at large following their escape Wednesday night from the Warren County Jail, five fugitives were being hunted today in the nearby hills.

The prisoners, according to Sheriff Ernest E. Marlowe, made their escape by sawing through the iron bars of a cell and also through the bars of a corridor window. Two hack saws, a file and a pair of pliers were found near the window. Sheriff Marlowe believes the tools were smuggled in.

The fugitives, as reported by Deputy Sheriff W. E. Sealock, are: "Dickie" Henry, convicted of assaulting an officer and sentenced to one year; Lacy Sargent and Campbell Williams, held for grand jury on charges of breaking and entering; Eddie Showers, charged with robbery, and Claude Green, sentenced to nine months on an assault charge.

Va. Rites to Mark 150th Year Of Mary Washington's Death

Dedication of New Landscaping, Inclosure To Be Feature of Special Ceremonies At Fredericksburg on May 15

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 5.—The 150th anniversary of the death of Mary Washington will be commemorated at exercises here on May 15 under auspices of the National Mary Washington Memorial Association.

A feature of the ceremonies will be the dedication of the new enclosure to the grounds and landscaping which are the gifts of the Garden Club of Virginia. The ceremony will take the place of exercises usually held at the grave on Mother's Day.

The new work comprises the third change made to the plot containing Mrs. Washington's grace in the century and a half since she was buried there. Shortly following his mother's death, General Washington caused a headstone to be placed at the grave.

In time the stone was lost or destroyed by relic hunters, and in 1833 the cornerstone of a marble monument was dedicated during exercises attended by President Andrew Jackson. Due to the death of Silas Burroughs, wealthy New Yorkers who had volunteered to furnish the funds for erecting the monument, it was never completed, and in 1894 the present shaft was dedicated with President Grover Cleveland as the chief distinguished visitor.

The building of the present monument followed nation-wide indignation which was led in the Capital by the Washington Post. It was caused by an auctioneer who obtained options on a considerable portion of the then undeveloped land in the vicinity of the grave and advertised that "Grave of Mary, the Mother of General Washington, to be sold at auction."

The late George W. Shepherd, Sr., local resident, who owned the immediate lot containing Mrs. Washington's grave, went into court and caused the land to be released from option. It was then given to a band of local women who formed an association for the preservation of the grave. Through their efforts the present monument was placed.

The tour tomorrow will include homes and gardens in Calvert, Prince Georges and Charles counties. The tour is sponsored by the garden clubs to raise funds for the preservation of colonial homes in the State Capital, Annapolis. It will end Sunday.

Old Christ Church and Middleham Chapel will be included in the Calvert County tour.

Insurance Firms Await Decision On Agents' Fees

Richmond, Va., May 5. (AP).—Approximately 30 insurance companies which challenged the constitutionality of a 1938 Virginia insurance regulatory statute awaited tonight the decision of a three-judge Federal Court on their petition for a permanent injunction to prohibit the act's enforcement.

Judge Morris A. Soper, of the United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals and District Judges Robert N. Pollard and Luther B. Way listened to arguments in the case for five hours Thursday at Alexandria before taking the question under advisement.

The act requires the payment of a portion of the commissions on insurance covering risks in the State to resident agents and countersigning of the contracts by these agents. A temporary injunction granted by Judge Pollard remains in force pending decision.

Frederick Bingo Players Safe; Police Center Fire on 'Pinballs'

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., May 5.—Bingo players will be safe from a police "crackdown drive," but Police Chief Allen Bartgis is showing no quarter to operators of pinball machines.

Even the innocent-looking machines which have no automatic pay-offs may be subjected to police action if pay-offs in connection with their operation are attempted, the chief asserted.

Pay-offs are pay-offs, he pointed out, regardless of whether the machine or an attendant does the paying off.

He indicated a close watch would be kept over the new type of machine which rewards high scorers with free games only. It pays no slugs or cash. Such machines have been installed in Baltimore and Police Commissioner Robert F. Stanton said no action would be taken against them unless gambling on them was discovered.

To backers of pinball machines who indicated they would ask prosecution of other antigaming law violators, such as the players of bingo, Chief Bartgis replied that the police department would not take the initiative in breaking up bingo games.

The prosecution of bingo games, he said, would be on warrants only.

Only one allegedly illegal pinball machine has been seized in Frederick County since the pinball license law expired Sunday midnight. Officers arrested Wilbur Summers, Myersville, and Mal Herman Jones, Frederick, and charged each with operating a gaming device. They confiscated a pinball machine they reported finding in a Myersville garage. Summers was released on $500 bond and Jones on $2,500 bond for action of the grand jury.

Grand Jury Again Assails Cheltenham

Boys' Reformatory Shows 'Crying Need' Of Proper Guidance, New Report Says

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 5.—The retiring January grand jury registered new criticism of the Cheltenham School for Boys today, asserting the colored reformatory showed a "crying need" for treating inmates with "some forbearance and enlightened guidance."

As previous grand jury reports have done, the latest emphasized correction was needed in "matters of personnel and policy, rather than the physical condition of the plant."

Since the institution is located in southern Maryland, the jury said, and is not in Baltimore City's jurisdiction, the Governor should name an investigating committee to examine its operation.

Cheltenham became a State institution in 1937. Its personnel was criticized last year by State Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones, who said half of the reformatory employes were unfit for any State jobs.

He instituted court action to test his authority over them, and the Court of Appeals ruled the law bringing Cheltenham into the State penal system likewise compelled Jones to take the employes into the merit system.

Richmond, Va., May 5 (AP).—M. D. Hart, secretary of the State Commission on Game and Inland Fisheries, said today reduction in the number and extent of forest fires in Virginia had been "very beneficial" to game in many sections of the State.

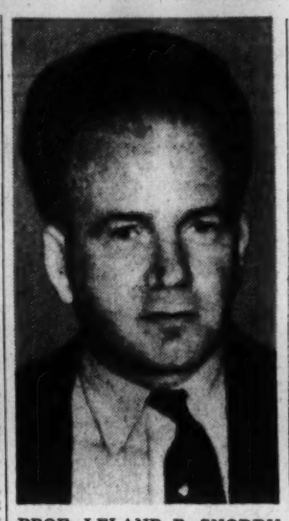
Danville, Va., May 5.—Prof. Leland B. Snoddy, of the University of Virginia, told the Virginia Academy of Science at the first session of its seventeenth annual meeting today how he had gone into the isolated Hudson Bay country to measure the intensity of the northern lights, both as to brightness and as to electrical discharges.

Auroral storms may have a disrupting effect upon electrical communications when they accompany radio and telegraphic "fadeouts," and Snoddy gave the results of his two trips to Churchill in northern Manitoba during the summers of 1937 and 1938 when he studied rapid changes in sky brightness during displays of the aurora borealis and measured the strength of the magnetic effects.

Prof. Snoddy said he planned to return to the north of Canada next summer with better photometric equipment with which he hopes to complete his studies which have been supported in part by a grant from the Virginia Academy of Science.

A. D. Pratt, of the Virginia agricultural experiment station at Blacksburg, reported to the section on medicine experiments to further modify the pasteurization process to prevent the destruction of vitamin C in milk.

Pratt said that because of the "destruction of a large per cent of the vitamin C by pasteurization of milk, nutritionists advise that the diet be supplemented by some other source of this factor. If some method of pasteurization could be devised that would avoid this destruction an enormous economic saving would result."



PROF. LELAND B. SNODDY

G. M. Shear, of the Virginia agricultural experiment station, presented a paper on experiments he conducted with H. D. Ussery, of the Virginia Tech department of physics, showing that the frenching disease of tobacco and poisoning by the element thallium being present in the soil are entirely different. His paper disagreed with an hypothesis that frenching results from thallium toxicity.

John P. Ingle, of Coeburn, Va., graduate student in education at the University of Virginia, gave a report based on the study of tests in both subject-achievement and mental ability of 131,741 Virginia pupils in grades from four to seven. This study shows, he said, that "most intelligence tests measure capacity for learning after learning has taken place, and not antecedent to the learning."

A marine deposit made in the heart of Richmond 30,000,000 years ago when the seacoast was at present fall line, was described by William R. Brown, of Staunton, graduate student in geology at the University of Virginia.

Tonight the annual academy's banquet was held but speaking was to be delayed until a late public meeting at the city auditorium. Dr. J. Shelton Horsley, of Richmond, will award the $450 offered by the academy each year to the research worker whose submitted paper is considered the best by an out-of-State judging committee. Twelve papers have been entered.

Baltimore Pair Win Women's Bridge Contest

Defeats Field of 26 In Opener of Northern Virginia Tournament

Playing in the women's game which was the curtain raising event of the Northern Virginia Bridge tournament, Mrs. James Cairns and Mrs. J. F. Mowell, both of Baltimore, defeated a field of 26 pairs composed of the ranking feminine partnerships of this section. The games were held yesterday at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria.

The winners piled up 184 match points in the one-session game, played in a McKenney-Baldwin movement. Mrs. C. W. Boyce and Mrs. W. S. Athey, of this city, one of the favored pairs, trailed by 3 points. Mrs. P. E. Henninger, Arlington, and Mrs. C. Murray Hall, of Chevy Chase, Md., finished third with 178½ points, Mrs. Charles Kavanaugh and Mrs. W. St. Aubins, another strong local pair, were half a point behind. There was a three-way tie for fifth place, Mrs. T. E. Ragland and Mrs. C. Kirk, of Baltimore, Mrs. John Seward and Mrs. J. R. Belt and Mrs. Roy Hackett and Mrs. M. H. Barre—all scoring 171 points.

Mrs. B. Robins and Mrs. Dixie T. Wright, defending champions, ranked tenth. While Capital players were in the majority, the cities of Richmond, Baltimore, Wilmington and Norfolk were well represented. Among the stars present was Mrs. Eve Latter, of Wilmington, the most prominent woman in the game since the recent Vanderbilt Cup classic in which she was a member of the team that knocked out the Four Aces, four-time holders of the trophy and the premier team in this country. Mrs. Latter was paired with Mrs. C. F. Waltman, of Reading, Pa., in the Alexandria game, finishing eighth.

Fifty pairs enrolled in the mixed-pair contest that was the second event on a three-day program. Mrs. Robins was again playing in defense of a trophy but paired with A. I. Westrich in place of Dr. F. C. Blanck who was her partner last year. The field was thick with visiting luminaries. One of the favorite pairs was John Crawford, young Philadelphia expert, and Miss Marian Crawford, also from the Quaker City.

The principal championship of the tournament is the open pair match to be played in two sessions today.

The pilots swooped down over the farmhouse several times to attract the attention of workmen in a nearby field.

Sculptor Promises To Make Changes In Jackson Model

Richmond, Va., May 5 (AP).—Joseph Pollia said today he was attempting to make his one-third scale model of the equestrian statue of Gen. Stonewall Jackson as historically accurate as possible.

He told the News-Leader by telephone that the bridle and saddle used on Sorrell, the general's horse, would be duplicated on the model of the monument which is to be erected on the Manassas battlefield.

"I am making any changes that will improve the statue," the New York sculptor said.

He estimated three or four months would be needed to complete the new model.

Webb Named Member of Road Body

O'Conor Appoints Banker, Retains Beall as Minority Choice on Board

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 5.—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor today appointed P. Watson Webb, Cambridge banker and publisher, as a member of the State roads commission, and announced former Chairman J. Glenn Beall would be continued in office temporarily as a minority member.

Webb, a Democrat, was an unsuccessful candidate for State comptroller on the O'Conor ticket in last September's primaries. He publishes the Cambridge Banner, a daily newspaper

Beall, a Republican appointee of former Gov. Harry W. Nice, retired as roads commission chairman May 1, when he was succeeded by Ezra B. Whitman, Gov. O'Conor's choice.

In a statement issued in conjunction with the appointments, the executive pointed out that Webb had been active for 35 years in various Eastern Shore enterprises in addition to newspaper work and banking. His wide experience, O'Conor said, would be "invaluable."

The new statute governing personnel of the commission requires that one member be from Baltimore City, one from Western Maryland, and the third from the Eastern Short. Beall is from Allegany County, Whitman from Baltimore, and Webb from Dorchester County.

Beall's job, the Governor made clear, was not to be regarded as permanent.

Sources close to the Governor said Beall was favored by many O'Conor advisers as the logical Republican for permanent membership on the commission. Others opposing his selection, it was said, forced the "temporary" appointment.

Runyon Picks Challedon to Win Derby Today

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, May 5.—Hold your hats, my hearties, we're going off the deep end. We're going to leap, and 24 hours from now we're going to look and see what happened.

This is the limb-climbing stunt to end all limb-climbing. The next guy caught sticking out his chin should be ignored as a petty plagiarist. Where angels fear to tread, that's where you'll find this department.

POVICH

No ifs, no ands, no buts. No excuses, no apologies, no reservations. Today we give you—a day before the race is run—the winner, the time, the order of the finish and the odds of the 1939 Kentucky Derby. Yes, and we give you the running account of the race, too.

All this a day before the race, before the nags even go to the post. That's the trick in it, mind you, as Billy Evans, the old umpire, once pointed out. At his hotel one night after a ball game, Evans was still being heckled by a fan who had squawked all afternoon at the umpire's decisions.

"Why, you robber," shouted the fan at Evans, "you called a couple of plays out there at first base today before they happened."

"Did I?" asked Evans calmly.

"Yes you did, and you know it."

"Well," said Evans, "that's the trick in it. Anybody can call 'em after they happen. It takes a great umpire to call 'em before they happen."

They're Off!—Or Are They—And It's El Chico

But this is no time to twiddle, or, we might add, twaddle. Give us the bugle, boy, get 'em on the track. Now a few strains of "My Old Kentucky Home," please. That's right, now walk 'em in the stalls. Well, what are we waiting for?

SIXTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $50,000 added. The Kentucky Derby. For 3-year-old colts and fillies. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:40. Off 5:43½. Winner, W. J. Ziegler, jr.'s, ch. c. (3), by John P. Grier—La Chica. Trained by M. Brady. Time, 2:04 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EL CHICO, $17.60, $6.20, $3.40; JOHNSTOWN (entry), $3.30, $3.10; CHALLEDON, $3.30.

What a race that was, my friends. And so they said El Chico couldn't go the route, huh? You should have been there tomorrow.

El Chico all the way—that was the story of tomorrow's 1939 Kentucky Derby. El Chico out there winging, the champion 2-year-old of 1933 still showing his heels to the crop he used to run away and hide from as an unbeaten juvenile.

El Chico by a half length over Johnstown, with the fast-charging Challedon another half length back. And barely getting into the picture was Technician, beaten a length for third.

T. M. Dorsett Gave the Winner a Mighty Run

The big Derby throng saw the sprinter T. M. Dorsett give El Chico a battle of it for the first half mile, with Johnstown in close attendance and moving into second in the backstretch when Dorsett chucked it. By two lengths El Chico was in front at the three-quarters, with the outsiders Dorsett and Viscounty in closest attendance after Johnstown.

Around the far turn, El Chico was still buck-jumping, a length of daylight showing between him and the favorite, with Technician nicely placed in fifth position and still not out of it. And now you hear a roar of "Come on you, Challedon," because the big bay from Maryland is making a move, beginning to pass tired horses and surging into fourth place.

But at the stretch turn it's still El Chico by two lengths, Johnstown by two, the fading Xalapa Clown by a half, Challedon now in fourth place and Technician, unable to get up, still fifth.

It's still a noss race. Here comes the long-striding Johnstown with his stretch rush. And here comes Challedon, also charging on El Chico. And down the stretch it's Nick Wall holding his horse together, outriding Jimmy Stout on Johnstown and Georgie Seabo on Challedon. And El Chico is still giving, and this is a real Dearby finish, and under the wire, it's still El Chico, by a half length—I think.

Reds Humble Leading Bees, 5 to 4, in 13th

By International News Service.

Boston, May 5.—The Cincinnati Reds today downed the National League-leading Bees, 5 to 4, after a 13-inning struggle.

Loose ball-handling helped the Reds put on the crusher. McCormick beat out a hit to start the thirteenth. Lombardi hit to Dick Errickson in the box. Errickson threw wide and high to Shortstop Miller at second and McCormick was safe, although Lombardi was out at first. Craft singled to center, scoring McCormick.

Jim Turner yielded two runs in the first inning and was lifted when he complained of a sore side. Errickson, his relief, gave six hits in 12 innings. Whitey Moore, who replaced Grissom, was the winning pitcher. Al Simmons drove a two-run homer for the Bees in the third.

Noted Writer Says If Johnstown Doesn't Win He'll Be Out of Money in Classic

By Damon Runyon.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Louisville, Ky., May 5.—

BALLAD OF DERBY DAY.

"RIDERS UP!"

Them high-toned trainers is talkin' low
As they're gittin' their jockeys ready to go
So I'll tell mine all he ought to know—
Son, jes' die in front!

This hoss is fitten as hands kin do,
And the rest of it's up to him and you,
So my instructions is mighty few—
Jes' die in front!

Thass all ol' Father Bill'd say
When I rode for him in another day,
And I reckon they ain't no better way—
Than to die in front!

Take him out there nad make that pace,
A dubby is nice but it's only a race,
And I'd druther be chased than have to chase—
So jes' die in front
"RIDERS UP!"

Those New Yorkers roaring around Louisville the past few days about Johnstown have scared the daylights out of the other owners of prospective Derby starters and not over ten horses will go to the post in Col. Matt Winn's great race tomorrow.

A Lot of "Hot Air"

However, that is about the usual sifting from the annual nomination of over 100 3-year-olds for the Derby, and confirms old Col. Ed Bradley's oft-quoted crack that it is a good 10-to-1 bet in the winter that you cannot then pick a horse that will reach the starting gate in May.

If we did not distinctly remember seeing Johnstown with our own eyes, we might get the impression from the New Yorkers gab that he is a new invention with a couple of turbines inside and not a horse at all. They describe him as something that could carry Mayor LaGuardia and run off and hide from any other 3-year-old in these United States.

He will undoubtedly be the favorite in the race. He is quoted at 6 to 5 tonight and the New Yorkers think that price is something good to eat. He is the biggest scare-horse that has come out of the East since the New Yorkers made the night before the Derby of 1926 hideous with their howls about Pompey, who finished back with the concessionare here at Churchill Downs. It is true that Johnstown has done something for them to scream about, but so had Pompey and even the last great Eastern Derby bust, Fighting Fox.

Picks Challedon

This fighting fox was also owned by William Woodward, the New York banker, who owns Johnstown, son of Jamestown, out of that great brood Mare la France, now the property of L. B. Mayer, the movie magnate.

William Woodward's Red Dots bowed down there at Churchill Downs before in the derby of the mighty Gallant Fox.

Hot or cold, wet or dry, fast or slow, we still fancy Challedon, from the rolling hills of old Maryland. It is our guess that there had better not be any tiring or faint hearted horses in front of Challengers little boy as they make that last turn for home. Challedon is a dopey sort of beginner and a little clumsy but he can run the final quarter faster than the first and it is that final quarter where many a derby is decided.

The horses in this race all carry 126 pounds, and they have to travel a mile and a quarter and that is no route and burden for sissy ponies.

We figure the race Challedon, Technician and Xalapa Clown. If Johnstown does not win we do not think he will be anywhere in the money. Incidentally, we think the dangerous horse in here for Challedon is Technician, hard-hitting winner of the Florida Flamingo stakes.

Pinned Against Rail

He got licked in the Derby trial the other day by Viscounty but throw that one out. Technician was pinned against the rail in the last stages and Ira Hanford, his rider, did not make any too edsperate a struggle with the horse when he saw how he was hand-

Cornell Rows Middies Today On Severn

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 5.—Undergraduate Cornell crew managers, busy rigging shells today beside the Severn, wistfully estimated their armada's chances against the powerful Navy eight tomorrow, and gave their freshman crew an even chance to take the Navy plebes.

The crew "nurses" hoped, without much conviction, that their underdog varsity and jayvee crews might pull to an upset victory over the high-powered Navy that threatens to add the 1939 intercollegiate rowing crown to the 1938 diadem they already sport.

Navy, impressive against Princeton and victors over Columbia Monday, rates as the odds-on favorite against the Ithacans, who showed their wash to Syracuse Saturday on Lake Cayuga in a race abbreviated by wind.

Coach "Stork" Sanford will boat a comparatively green crew against Navy. Capt. John (Commodore) Furman at No. 5 and Jim Young, No. 6, are the only varsity sweepsters who rowed in the boat than finished next to last at Poughkeepsie last year.

It was indicated that Sanford has better material this year, as Ben Dean and Stan Allen of the '38 varsity have been relegated to the Jayvee crew this year.

Stroke this year is Dick (Rip) Collins, a junior graduate from the Jayvees. He displaced Young, Stroke last year, who moved to No. 6.

The frosh crew, stroked by Nick Kruse, whose daddy rowed on three winning Cornell crews at Poughkeepsie, carries the hopes of the big red for a rowing revival Cornell.

Cornell dopesters said the Babes, the best frosh crew in years, had the best chance of hanging up a win over Navy.

Several Hundred Watch Representatives Of Horses Play 'Hide and Seek' With Entries

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Churchill Downs Race Track, Ky., May 5.—Superstition, thy name is racing. The "playing of hunches" and the like kept the Kentucky Derby entry box empty for 45 minutes this morning as representatives of the ten horses finally named installed to keep from being the first to enter his horse. Although a crowd of several hundred was on hand at 7 a. m. it was not until the best part of an hour later that Neely Clendennin, stable agent for the Milky Way Farm, slid the completed blank of On Location into the box.

Before Clendennin acted for Trainer Ray Waldron, several agents and trainers had been in the vicinity of the box but decided to wait when they learned no entry had been made. Trainer J. J. Flannigan, who conditions the Valdina Farm's Viscounty, was first to reach the secretary's office. He shook his head after learning he was No. 1 and did not return until after On Location and T. M. Dorsett had been entered. John Barner, an agent, placed the slip in the box for Joe W. Brown's T. M. Dorsett.

As if to indicate that there will be a close finish in tomorrow's classic, the names of Johnstown, El Chico, Challedon and Technician were put in the box in quick order.

"In Their Pitching"

Tommy Driscoll, assistant trainer for the Belair Stud, made the Johnstown entry without comment. Trainer Matt Brady, of El Chico, his arm in a cast as the result of a recent injury, said, "Our colt is in great shape and we'll be in there pitching and don't make the mistake of counting last Saturday's race too much against us."

Lou Schaefer, former Jockey, took charge of gettir Challedon, the Maryland hope, into the race. He looked up at the cloudless sky and said he would prefer an off track as the soft foting would move up the son of Challenger. He looked at Driscoll and remarked, "But what's the difference. We'll be there or thereabouts."

John Whitely, an agent for the Woolford Farm, did the honors for

Krakauskas Hurls Well But Nats Lose

Pitcher Bill Lee Gives Griffmen Only Run When He Overthrows First Base in Fifth Inning

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Ill., May 5.—The Nats' daily dirge—the echo of another enemy home run—was heard again today in Comiskey Park and out of the keeping of the Washington club passed another ball game. Licked they were, 2 to 1, by big Larry Rosenthal's sixth-inning swat into the rightfield bleachers.

That home run was double-edged grief for the Nats, licked for the second straight day by a four-base clout, and still suffering the dubious distinction of being the only club in the league that does not have at least one homer to its own credit.

For big Joe Krakauskas, particularly, it was a grievous homer. The Lithuanian left-hander was doing a considerable job of it on the mound in a southpaw duel with Chicago's Thornton Lee, and had a 1-1 tie in his possession until Rosenthal delivered the game to the White Sox with his four-base blast.

Nats Impotent Crew

Meeting up with an old nemesis in Lee, the Nats were an impotent crew today, despite their eight bills. The only run they scored was a gift affair—contributed by Lee in the fifth inning when he stopped firing at the batters and threw to first base, making an overthrow that ushered the Washington run home.

It was a sad betrayal of Krakauskas by the Nats, because the White Sox's winning margin in the tight duel was provided them not by Krakauskas, but by Rookie Johnny Welaj in right field. It was a tame fly ball, dropped by Welaj in the fifth inning for a two-base error, that paved the way for the important first run of the Chicago Club.

For four innings it was a scoreless duel between Krakauskas and Lee before the ladies' day crowd of 12,-

Hunt Crushes Former Jinx, Defeats Riggs

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, May 5.—Midshipman Joe Hunt licked a childhood jinx in trouncing Bobby Riggs, ranking American tenis amateur, here today.

Hunt's 6-2, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3, victory over Riggs, his rival since their grade school days in Los Angeles, scrambled the United States Davis Cup picture. Riggs, No. 2 last year, had been virtually conceded the No. 1 berth since the retirement of Don Budge, now a pro.

Hunt was completely master of Riggs. The latter, a couple of years older than the 20-year-old Hunt, previously held the "Indian sign" on his fellow townsman, but the Middie exploded the hex today.

Hunt's overhand game was the margin of victory. He held Riggs even in baseline duels, and outclassed him at the net and in midcourt.

Riggs was playing his usual masterly game. Deftly as a surgeon he probed for weaknesses in Hunt's game, but found the kid he used to beat armored at ever point. He played skillfully on Hunt's backhand, but found himself matched. Shot matched skill until Hunt invariably went tot he net for the kill and the point.

The guy named Joe had all the tickets today. Riggs found a charging bomber in place of the easy-going younster of yesterday.

Walter Pate, chairman of the United States Davis Cup committee, who brought Riggs, Johnny Doeg and Wayne Sabin here for practice with Hunt, previously noted that Naval Academy discipline and training had given Hunt's game the "killer" touch it lacked. Riggs took the brunt of Hunt's new-found climax wallop.

Riggs had bets on himself to win today, and wasn't fooling. He was earlier in the week trimmed in three one-set practice matches by Hunt, but today was their first match-length test.

Black Sweep Heads a Strong Field in Virginia Gold Cup

Warrenton Card Lists Five Events

Virginia National Is Secondary Feature; First Race Is Slated For 3 o'Clock

By Anne Hagner.

The Virginia Gold Cup, feature event on the card of five races scheduled for the Broadview course, near Warrenton, Va., today, brings out nine horses in quest of the $1,500 trophy.

Heading the list of competitors is Mrs. Frank M. Gould, who is sending her newest ecquisition, Black Sweep, to the post in an effort to win the big cup for the third consecutive year and thus gain its permanent position. The New York sportswoman's great timber-topper, Ostend, annexed the award in 1937 and 1938, but his racing career ended several weeks ago when he broke down at the Middleburg races.

Winner of the event that proved to be Ostend's waterloo was Black Sweep, then owned by Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, of Middleburg, who had hunted him all winter. Black Sweep's outstanding victory came as a complete surprise to hunt meet followers, who had given heavy backing to Coq Bruyere, Ostend [illegible] Fighter.

Mrs. Wiltshire's sale of the black son of Sweep By-Transway occurred only a few days ago, and Mrs. Gould immediately entered her purchase and another steeplechaser, Postman Home, in the Virginia classic, thus greatly raising her hopes of carrying home the trophy for keeps.

The Wiltshire colors are not out of the race through Black Sweep's sale, however, for Maj. Wiltshire has also entered his recent Middleburg point-to-point winner, Kingsland.

Other entries are J. W. Y. Martin's Comonhome, Mrs. Stuart Spilman's Music Mountain, whose other starts this season netted him a win in the Raymond Belmont Memorial at Middleburg and second place in the Deep Run Hunt Cup at Richmond; W. F. Cochran, jr.'s Or Else, which lost his rider in the Maryland Hunt Cup last week; C. O'Donnell Lee's Arithmetic; G. A. Laing's Captain Bill, and Walter Wickes' Deflation.

Secondary feature on the card, the Virginia National, which has also drawn a classy field of starters, carires a purse of $1,500. It was won last year by Blackcock ,owned by Louis E. Stoddard, jr.

Other events on the card are the Warrenton Hunt Cup, over timber; the Fauquier Plate, a mile and a half over hurdles, and the Broadview, a 2-mile race over brush.

The first race is set for 3 o'clock.

Early morning risers who plan to head Warrenton-ward in the afternoon are also expected to include in the day's outing a stop-off at U. S. Randle's Bannockburn Farm, where more than 28 top hunters and race prospects will be auctioned off, begininng at 9:30. Heading the lits of horses to go under the hammer is Sport Marvel, Randle's ace championship winner, who will probably bring the fanciest price of the sale. Randle's farm is located naar Fairfax, Va.

Red Sox Beat Tigers, Gain Lead; Yanks Lose

Boston Rookie Gives Three Hits; Cronin, Foxx Hit Home Runs As Mates Win, 4-1

Detroit, May 5.—A three-hit pitching performance by Rookie Woodrow Rich sent the Boston Red Sox into the American League lead today with a 4-1 victory over Detroit's Tigers as the New York Yankees lost to Cleveland. Rich fanned one batter and walked three.

Schoolboy Rowe, pitching for Detroit, scattered nine Boston hits but home runs by Manager Joe Cronin and Jimmy Foxx gave the Sox their winning margin. Rowe batted in the lone Detroit run with a single in the fifth inning. He struck out Ted Williams, Boston outfielder who hit two successive home runs yesterday, three times. It was the Tigers' fourth defeat in a row.

Trosky's Double Scoring Milnar Brings 2-1 Victory In Eleventh Inning

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, May 5.—In the second extra-inning contest they have played in as many days, the Cleveland Indians nosed out the New York Yankees 2 to 1 in the 11th today and dropped the champions into second place in the America League.

Hal Trosky, veteran first baseman for the Tribe, wrecked a nicely pitched six-hit game by Lefty Gomez when he doubled his own pitcher, Southpaw Al Milnar, hime in the second extra frame. Milnar walked to open the inning and advanced to second when Rollie Hemsley also drew a pass.

Hemsley's triple and Trosky's grounder gave the Indians their other run in the sixth after Tom Henrich's single and Bill Dickey's double had scored for the Yankees in the first half of the same inning.

Milnar was touched for eleven hits and four bases on balls in addition to having two errors behind him. But he tightened up in every jam and left 15 Yankees stranded on the sacks. In the fourth, eighth and ninth New York had the bases loaded when retirc'

In contrast Gomez was seldom threatened until the 11th and walked only one batter before the payoff.

It was the first time this season that Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yanks has used Charley Keller and George Selkirk, lefthanded hiting outfielders, against southpaw pitching and the understanding was he didn't want to break up a winning combination and wished to take full advatage of Cleveland's short right field. Lefthanders god eight of the Yankee hits—four by Henrich.

Bob Seeds put on an individual hitting display with a home run in the second and another in the fourth with two on base but the visitors overcame this margin with a five-run flurry which chased Clydell Castleman and Bill Lohrman in the sixth.

Terps' 5-Run Rally Beats Richmond U.

Calling all cars! Calling all cars! Be on the lookout for Hugh Keller and Adam Bengoechea, a pair of Maryland baseball players. They are wanted for twin larceny and theft of a 8-5 victory from the University of Richmond yesterday between the hours of 4 and 6:20 p. m. at College Park.

The first named is a junior, about 5 feet, 11 inches tall, and is wanted for twice copping home plate, the second steal scoring the decisive run to snap Richmond's six-game winning streak and hand the Spiders their second defeat in 13 games this season.

The second named, about 5 feet, 6 inches, weight about 145 pounds, is sought as an accomplice. In the eighth inning, as the Terrapins came from behind to score five runs against Porter Vaughn, Richmond's ace left hander, Bengoechea stealthily pilfered both second and third after walking, to place himself in position to score the tying run on Eddie Johnson's single.

That is all, that is all. 6:26 p. m.

Here's the Story

That was all, as far as the accomplishing of Maryland's sixth straight victory and its fifth Southern Conference triumph in succession, is concerned but the story of yesterday's thrilling battle is just beginning.

Nothing yet has been said of Maryland's lefthanded pitcher, Earl Springer who, with another of his scintillating, stout-hearted performances, held the hard-hitting Richmonders to ten scattered hits and three earned runs. Springer whiffed eight hitters of the lineup that has been the scourge of the South for two consecutive years, and he walked only one man as he chalked up his fifth straight victory. Starke Jones, who started against Springer, retired with none out in the seventh.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson,
(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Joe Krakauskas, despite his defeat at Chicago yesterday, was the outstanding performer for the Nats, and to him goes the chief award in the latest distribution of points in the Man of the Month Contest.

To Krakauskas, five points, because he pitched well enough to win, if given anything but the feeble batting support he received yesterday.

To Jimmy Wasdell, two points, because he made two of the Nats' eight hits, both of them perfect bunts down the third base line.

To Angelo Giuliani, two points, because he hit a triple with one out in the seventh to put the tying run in scoring position.

To Rick Ferrell, one point, because his single to center in the fifth paved the way for the Nats' only run. The totals:

Jimmy Wasdell	5	Charley Gelbert	2
Rick Ferrell	6	Buddy Myer	2
Joe Krakauskas	5	Alex Alexandra	2
Cecil Travis	4	Angelo Giuliani	2

Woolf breeds his horses over in Missouri and has been mighty lucky with them, though he recently lost his great stallion, Insco, by death.

The one we cannot getout of our mind is El Chico, the 2-year-old champion of 1938 and the 3-year-old champion bust of 1939 to date. It is not like cagey old Matt Brady to bring El Chico here unless he thought the little horse had some kind of a chance. The general opinion seems to be that El Chico cannot go a mile and a quarter in a street car, but we are going to have a small saver on him just in case.

29-Year-Old Rookie Allows Chicago Only Seven Hits

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 5.—John Whitlow Wyatt, a 29-year-old rookie who came to the Dodgers from Milwaukee, clamped down on the Chicago Cubs with a seven hit pitching job which gave Brooklyn its second straight victory of the series today, 6 to 3.

It was Wyatt's third win and he made it decisive by getting a double and a single at the plate, batting in two runs in a sixth inning rally which chased the Cub's own rookie star, Gene Lillard, to the showers. Lillard Forced in one run with a walk in this inning and another was sacrificed home.

Tony Lazzeri got his third homer of the season in the third and a dauble and single in the fourth added another Brooklyn tally.

It was Chicago's seventh defeat in the last eight games.

Hoyas Bobble Seven Times; Lose to Fordham, 6 to 4

New Yorkers Score Three Runs On Hit, Walk and Several Errors

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 5.—Georgetown's baseball forces continued to suffer losses on their annual Northern campaign today, bowing 6-4.

The Hoyas, after leading Fordham for the first five innings and holding the Rams even up to the eighth, saw the New Yorkers suddenly score three runs on one hit, a walk and an unhappy series of errors. The inning ended with a sparkling Georgetown double play in which Jack McGowan captured Hank Borowy's high fly and flipped it to Joe Moran to catch the Fordham runner, but the damage was done.

The game was loosely played with Georgetown committing seven of the ten errors.

Georgetown got eight hits to Fordham's seven, and both starting pitchers, Vincent Powers for Georgetown and Gene Bowe for Fordham, went the route. Bowe struck out 12 Hoya batsmen.

Jim Durkin, Georgetown centerfielder proved a pillar of batting strength with three hits in five trips to the plate, including a double.

Joe McFadden, the rightfielder, got two for three and McGowan obtained a triple in four tries. The game's only other extra-base hit was a home run by Hank Borowy in the fifth, with none on. It was the tying score. Borowy, the Rams' unbeaten hurling star, was originally slated to pitch against the Hoyas, but Jack Coffey, Fordham coach, decided to use him against Villa Nova tomorrow instead, and switched him to a fielding position.

Georgetown's big inning proved the third, when they pushed across two runs on three hits, including McGowan's triple.

Wilfrid G Takes Greenspring Steeplechase at Pimlico

Pays $11.80; Silver Lance Is Second

Two Take Final Jump As a Team but Victor Answers Call to Win By 2½ Lengths

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pimlico Race Track, May 5.—Wilfrid G, racing in the red and blue silks of Gordon F. Perry, of Canada, won the twenty-seventh running of the Greenspring Valley Steeplechase Handicap here this afternoon as jumpers held the featured spot on the program.

Wilfrid G, ridden by Eddie Mitchell, finished out the 2-mile journey 2½ lengths clear of C. Mahlon Kline's Silver Lance, but it was a real race until the pair had cleared the final jump as a team. Then Wilfrid appeared to cut Silver Lance off sharply, going on to win after what looked like interference.

T. Roby thought so, too, and he claimed foul against the winner but the stewards declined to rule against the winner.

Rioter, from the Thomas Hitchcock Stable, was third, beaten another six lengths for the place, while Our Sailor completed the finishing field far in the rear. Buck Langhorne and Good Chance, the other starters, fell during the running.

Lance Forces Pace

Wilfrid G was a forward factor from the start and Mitchell had the 7-year-old Anmer gelding on the front end for the final mile, with Silver Lance forcing the pace. Rioter ran evenly but under 154 pounds could not make a real threat.

Owner Perry picked up $2,390 first money by Wilfrid G's victory and the time of the race was 3:52 4-5. Backers of the winner got $11.80 in the mutuels as Rioter was the 8-to-5 favorite.

The program opened with 12,000 fans undecided as to whether Mac's Cantor or Kanalbret had taken the first event, a 4½-furlong dash for 2-year-olds. The photo showed Mac's Cantor the winner by a nose, with Engles Charm taking third honors, two lengths back. Mac's Cantor, ridden by Irving Anderson, was in second position behind the pace-making Kanalbret all the way to the last 50 yards when the Happy Argo colt got up to take it all. The price was $12.90 and the time :55 2-5 seconds.

Completing a daily double of $102.50 for $2, Brandon Stable's Tutticurio took the second race, a 6-furlong dash for $1,500 platers. Distract, the favorite, was second. Prince Turley, who set the early pace, lasted to be third. Backers of Tutticurio got $12.30 for $2. The winner completed the distance in 1:13 4-5.

Western Beats Wilson, 8 to 3; Eastern Routs Tech, 5 to 2

Raiders Take Undisputed First Place

Carmel Nance Gives Presidents 2 Hits; Three Homers Hit—Two By Western

By Bill Burnett

Breathing new life into the inter-high prospects of Western's diamond crew, cool-headed Carmel Nance, the Raider's big lefthander, pitched a two-hit effort against Woodrow Wilson yesterday on his home lot, winning the game by 8 to 3 and installing his team in undisputed first place in the West section of the public high series. By its loss, Wilson dropped to last place in the previously deadlocked standings.

The other half of the series double-header, played at Tech between the defenders and Eastern's 1938 titlist, went to the latter when it pounded two Tech hurlers for ten hits staved off a rally in the ninth, and won by a score of 5 to 2. Second place fell to the Easterners with the victory, and Tech held on to last.

Except for the final inning of Western's top-heavy triumph over Wilson, Nance was never in serious trouble. Wilson jumped into a 1 to 0 lead in the second, but two runs by the Raiders in the same period overcame that. Each club scored once in the fourth and from there in it was all Western.

Near Disaster

The ninth was nearly disastrous. Four men went to first with charity passes from Nance, lobbing one from Western's six-run lead. Then, with the paths overcrowded and two out, Nance faced a pinch-hitter and struck him out. It was a story-book climax with all the trimmings.

Eastern's belated victory in the East division, long overdue, was achieved chiefly through a three-run splurge in the seventh. Tech scored once in the first and it took the Tide until the fifth to tie it up. Tech again took the lead in the sixth, but Eastern's spree in the next stanza locked it up. "Puddin" Lovett, Tide hurler, hit a triple to start the proceedings, a hit batter and base on balls came next, and Galasso wound it up with a double.

Nats Beaten By White Sox Home Run, 2-1

Nats

000. Lee was pitching 2-hit ball, and Krakauskas was holding the White Sox to 5 hits, 3 of which were distinctly tainted. And then, in the fifth, the Nats got a break.

Wasdell Out Stealing

Jimmy Wasdell, whose two bunts accounted for a pair of the Nats' eight hits today, bunted safely with one out in the fifth, but was out trying to steal, and then Rick Ferrell slammed a single to center. He reached second when Luke Appling bobbled Krakky's grounder. At this point, Lee attempted to pick Krakauskas off first and threw wildly past Kuhel, Ferrell scampering home and Krakauskas reaching third.

The Nats muffed a chance for a big inning after Chase followed by Walking and stealing second, because Bleuge popped a fly to right.

The White Sox got that run back immediately to tie the game at 1-1. They got it with two out. Kuhel lofted a short fly into right field and Rookie Welaj, ordinarily a superlative fielder, waved Buddy Myer from the scene and attempted to make the catch. He muffed it, and Kuhel reached second from which point Gerald Walker promptly scored him with a single to center.

It's All Over Now

It was in the next inning that Mr. Rosenthal picked out a Krakauskas fast ball and won the game.

The Nats made a few feeble attempts to get the tying run home in the late innings. Myer singled with two out but was stranded by Travis. Angie Giuliani tripled to the right field scoreboard in the seventh, but was left on third by Krakky who rolled out and Case who struck out. In the eighth, Estalella singled with one out, and Welaj and Myer were no help. In the ninth, Wasdell beat out another bunt with one on and Giuliani obligingly hit into a double play for the White Sox.

In an attempt to salvage one victory out of the three-game series with the White Sox, Manager Bucky Harris will send Jimmy DeShong back to the mound tomorrow.

DeShong lasted only two innings against the Browns earlier in the week. The White Sox will attempt to sweep the series tomorrow by pitching the right-handed Jack Nott.

Rick Ferrell was forced out of today's game in the sixth inning when he was struck on the throwing hand by a foul tip. His forefinger was severely bruised, but the injury is not expected to keep him out of action for more than two days.

Superstition

Carries Usual Smile

Earl Sande, who rode three Derby winers, was around to see that Heather Broom was salefly in the fold. Sande was the center of all eyes and much sought by the news hounds las year when Stagehand was taken sick and failed to start. Sande had his usual smile when asked about the chances of the John Hay Whitney color bearer. "You can never tell about racing," said the handy guy.

Haight Picks Challedon in Derby Today

Haight

Horses, horses, horses, crazy over horses is putting it mildly.

And don't think for a minute that the prospects of the smallest Derby field since Exterminator, "Old Bones," won his race in 1918, has lessened interest one iota in the classic of the Blue Grass. To Kentuckians there is only one Kentucky Derby, one horse race and it would remain tops even if it were a two-horse affair between Counter Pass and Engle's Lad.

The line-up for this Derby contained no surprises. The horses who were expected to battle the mile and a quarter tomorrow for gold and glory were named in the over-night entries. The Belair Stud's express, Johnstown, the probable favorite; William Ziegler, jr's El Chico, out to make a comeback; John Hay Whitney's Heather Broom, Earl Sande-trained; the Valdina Farm's Viscounty, winner of the Derby trial; the Milky Way Farm's On Location, labeled as only out to carry colors; Mrs. B. Franzheim's Xalapa Clown, an outsider; the Woolford Farm's Technician, star of Florida racing; W. L. Brann's Challendon, hope of Maryland, and Joe W. Brown's T. M. Dorsett, recovered from illness—yes they are all on the entry list and primed for their best efforts.

In addition to these nine, regarded as "sure" starters, Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons has entered Challenge, like Challedon, a son of the sire Challenger II. This colt is regarded as the Belair Stud's "rain insurance" and will start only on an off track.

Showers Predicted

Despite the fact that today's racing was conducted under cloudless skies, the weather man refuses to put a complete OK on the set-up for tomorrow. He had predicted showers for late Saturday afternoon or night. But regardless of weather conditions, the 1939 classic is likely to set a new high for Derby crowds or, in fact, race gatherings in this country. While Col. Matt Winn, who pulls the strings that control the show here, never announces figures on Derby attendance, an unofficial record is believed in the making.

For the first time in modern Derby history there will be a 50-cent admission charge to a section at the head of the stretch. With this block filled the attendance may reach an estimated 80,000. Today's crowd was an indicator. More than 30,000 saw the Derby-eye program. Ten races are scheduled tomorrow with the first post time 12 o'clock.

Despite a decided shift to Challedon, due mostly to the shower prediction, Johnstown remains a heavy favorite. The Belair Stud star, winner of the Wood Memorial was quoted at from 6-5 to 4-5 by the various price-makers. The blinding speed that Johnstown showed in his New York triumph plus his brilliant workout here, will make him a worthy favorite.

Has Proved His Mettle

But there's the matter of 1,110 feet of the stretch run that holds the answer to whether or not Johnstown is truly a great horse. He has proved his mettle up to a mile and 70 yards of the 6,600 feet that constitute the mile and one-quarter of the Derby. Tomorrow, he must carry on the longest route. Those who back him say he will stick it out. Those who will support another horse say he will be caught.

That trainer Fitzsimmons intends to have Johnstown set all the pace goes without saying. The son of Jamestown is the front-running type. He likes to turn on the heat and keep it on. But there are those who contend that "something" will be running with Johnstown. Many contend that this "something" will be his old rival, El Chico, "The Kid," owned by the Ziegler Stable and the undefeated 2-year-old champ of last year.

There is a feeling that El Chico has not run his race. That the Derby will see him come into his own. Since his defeats in New York this year, there have been those "just a sprinter" references to El Chico. This belief is not shared by Trainer Matt Bradey or Jockey Nick Wall. It would be fate, if El Chico failed to win but ran his ardent foe, Johnstown, into the ground and defeat.

Challedon "If" Horse

The colt who has the Derby experts guessing is Challedon. The W. L. Brann star in turf parlance, "didn't beat much" last year. He won three futurities—the Maryland, Pimlico and New England. He has been to the races only once this year in the Chesapeake Stakes at Havre de Grace in which he was third. Those of us who saw that race know that Challedon was not abused. Then again he was giving away weight. Tomorrow it is 126 pounds for all.

Challedon is the closest thing to a "Washington" horse in the Derby line-up although Johnstown spent a short period at the Belair Farm out near Bowie. Challedon was wintering at our Benning (D. C.) track and the open winter in the District was a factor in getting him into shape. Bred and foaled at W. L. Brann's Glade Valley Farm near Frederick, Challedon carries the hopes of Maryland fans and horsemen. It would be another feather in the cap of Maryland as a breeding center if the Brann colors could fly it.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

(Bob Considine is on a brief vacation. While he is away his column is being written by famous figures in the sports world. Today's column is written by Gene Campbell.)

By Gene Campbell,
Member of the N. Y. Racing Commission Staff.

New York, May 5.—I have been asked to tell what I know about watching the running of horse races. Space will hardlly permit me to try in a column the length of this; but I can at least begin with the statement that ten dead heats were run in the United States in 1935 and 264 in 1938.

CONSIDINE

The wide divergence means nothing more than that in 1935 the placing of horses was judged by the human eye, and in 1938 by the instantaneous cameras now in universal use on race courses.

In other words, the old time placing judges, with years of knowledge and experience behind them, saw wrong about 254 times out of every 264.

The figures ought to encourage the thousands who find their best diversion at race tracks and—if I may offer a gentle suggestion—ought to imbue them with a little humility also. Because it is simply impossible for the human eye to "read a race" with an accuracy sufficient to apprehend even a small proportion of the thousand incidents, conditions, circumstances and eventualities that make it up. If we see 10 points out of every 264 we are, at least, doing as well as the expert judges used to do.

Even Post Positions Depend on Racing Luck

The start of a race alone, broken up as it is to the eye by the mechanical divisions between the horses, can't be seen at all with any precision unless one is standing beside it. And, as we know, the starts of most races are made on the far sides of courses. More races have been won and lost at starts than through home stretches. Racing luck is an immense factor in the first half furlong from starting gates. Even the post positions of the horses—which are drawn by lot—are in the lap of racing luck and nothing else.

Then, the average racegoer takes no count of horses' good days or off days. Even some of our veteran race writers fail to do this though they are well aware that they have their own fluent days and inarticulate days. A horse somehow, by the public at large, is looked on as an animal with four legs, one in each corner, who ought to run today exactly as he did last week. He'll never do that. He's just a horse, with a good digestion or a dainty digestion, a nervous disposition of a placid one, a predilection for running or an indifference to it. His legs, or only one of them, that were sound last week may be hurting him abominably today. Racing is a hard business. The ranks of the platers are filled with horses that are highly bred, full of the will to run and honest to the bone, but which can't do themselves justice half the time because their damaged underpinning won't let them.

Of course, we all feel that if we were professional riders we would acquit ourselves much better than the boys who are out there doing it. It doesn't occur to us that race riding is an involved and recondite art and that, to make a successful rider, a boy has to have skill, lightning judgment, cool head and hands and—on occasion—downright inspiration. And even the race riders, watching from the ground sometimes, think they see things that are not there at all or miss things that the veriest tyro in the stands sees clearly.

Trust Safely Put in Officials

I am constantly advising friends, further, that many races are won and lost before the horses go out of the saddling paddock and that in the paddock, if one has the eyes to read, there is a wealth of information patent to him who knows which way to look. A horse long between his ends, for illustration, is at a disadvantage on a track with four turns because he is not constructed to turn corners readily, although on a track like Belmont or Aqueduct he may do admirably because the long stretches on those tracks give him the opportunity to open out and extend himself. Omaha, if you remember him in 1935, was a long horse and his stable never ran him but once at Jamaica and never at Empire. Top Row, in the same year, was only 15 hands and as handy as a polo pony. Tracks like Empire were just his dish.

The state of a horse's coat, the way he walks in and out, his demeanor in his stall as he waits to be saddled, are all revealing signs of his condition. If the day is an indifferent one with him his whole bearing expresses it plainly. Or expresses the reverse. Some horses even have a look in their eyes when they are going to race their best. Mrs. John D. Hertz's horse, Count Arthur, was one that I remember as almost "giving you the office" on the days he felt on top.

In the long run, however, trust may be safely placed with those gentlemen whose business it is to watch races officially. I mean the stewards, the paddock, the starting and patrol judges. Each has his whole or separate function to fill during every race that is run and each one—though he can't see everything—can see all that is necessary for him to see. Each knows interference when he sees it, and crossing and fouling and listlessness. None of them ever places a bet himself or has any personal interest in what horses win or lose. And each knows that if racing isn't run to the limit of the capacity of horses and riders, it will drop in public favor and his official career be hurt or ended.

They are the men who merely smile when they hear of "fixed" races and "elected" horses. Because they know that in 99 cases out of a 100, all rumors to that effect have their origin in the discussions of disgruntled bettors who, have backed their judgment and found it unreliable, decline to ascribe their state of pocket to their own miscalculation and inexperience but—being human—to the track and everybody on it except themselves.

550 Athletes In Maryland Field Day

Five Sports Events Slated on Program At College Park Today

By Jack Munhall.

In one of the biggest conglomerations of athletic activity ever scheduled hereabouts more than 550 trim-limbed youngsters will converge on College Park this afternoon to participate in the University of Maryland's twenty-second annual Field Day program.

Two track meets, one an inter-scholastic meet with open and closed sections, the second a dual affair between the undefeated squads of Maryland and Washington and Lee University; freshman and varsity tennis; varsity lacrosse, and varsity baseball will be merged for at least five solid hours of entertainment.

The schedule reads like this:

10 a. m.—Freshman tennis, Blue Ridge vs. Maryland.

1 p. m.—Track, interscholastic meet, with 13 open events and 9 closed to county high schools of the State.

Life Insurance Money Shifts Into Industry

Private Investments Top U. S. Bonds for First Time Since 1931

New York, May 5.—Additions to life insurance company investments in private industry in 1938 exceeded purchases of United States Government bonds for the first time since 1931, according to an investigation of the trends in the investments of 49 life insurance companies just made by the Industrial Conference Board.

Last year these companies added $717,000,000 to their holdings in private corporate securities, and only $188,000,000 in United States Government bonds. In 1934, 1935 and 1936, when opportunities for private investment were limited, the companies increased their holdings of Government bonds by $2,886,000,000. Only a little more than a third of that amount was added to their commitments in private corporate securities.

The 49 companies, which hold approximately 92 per cent of the admitted assets of all such companies in the United States, have increased their assets by premium receipts and income on investments by an average of more than $1,000,000,000 a year during the past decade. The estimated increase last year amounted to $1,308,000,000.

"These sums are so large," says the conference board report, "that the way in which they are invested exerts an appreciable influence on general economic conditions.

The tapering off of insurance investment in Government bonds began in 1937, and the commitment of the bulk of new funds to private industry is regarded as "of great importance not only to private borrowers but also to bankers, as banks are likely to be called upon to absorb a considerable part of the new Government bond issues previously taken by insurance companies."

Excess Reserves Near Peak

It is believed that the Treasury and Federal Reserve authorities will, more than ever, try to keep the banking system of the country in condition to finance the Federal deficits. At present, according to the report, the banks are able to do this easily. Largely because of huge gold imports, their excess reserves are close to peak levels. Trey are already buying Federal issues more freely. Holdings of Government obligations by reporting blanks in 101 cities rose $334,000,000 in the first quarter of this year, compared with a $973,000,000 rise in all of 1938, and a decline in 1937.

"If encouraged and helped to do so by the Federal Government, the banks of the country can keep adding to their bond investments almost without limit, but this can hardly be accomplished without a further inflation in bank credit."

The annual increases in the 49 life insurance companies' holdings of United States Government bonds and of private corporate bonds and stocks from 1932 to 1938 are shown in the following table (in millions of dollars):

Wheat Recedes After Touching Season's Highs

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 5.—In a typical weather market, wheat prices fluctuated widely and nervously today, rising a cent to new seasonal highs and then tumbling below yesterday's closing levels.

Early gains that lifted 1939 crop contracts, July and September, a full cent to 74½ and 74¼, respectively, were wiped out when the market, due to profit taking, declined as much as 1½ cents to lows of 73 for both contracts. May wheat, which rose to 75¾, within ⅛ cent of its best level since last July, dropped to 74⅜.

Fear that further deterioration may occur in dry sections of the winter wheat belt, where good moisture relief has not been received in some time, coupled with strength in foreign markets, touched off the early rush to buy. However, private reports indicated there were light to fair rains in parts of Texas, Oklahoma and southwestern Kansas and the official forecast predicted scattered showers and cooler weather over much of the grainbelt. This caused the profit taking.

Wheat closed unchanged to ½ lower compared with yesterday's finish, July and September 73⅛-¼; corn unchanged to ½ higher, July 51⅛-¼, September 51⅞-52; oats ⅜-⅝ higher; rye unchanged to ¼ lower; lard 7 to 13 lower. Oats and soy beans were at new high for the season, the latter being quoted up to 95⅛ for May delivery.

Higher Wages Lift Public Buying Power

Increases Plus Lower Living Costs Add 8% To Value of Dollar

Minneapolis, May 5.—An 18 cents gain in wages and lowered living costs have contributed to lift the real buying power of the American public 8 cents on the dollar over a year ago, according to a monthly study of what people get and spend, made public here today by Investors Syndicate.

"Real income," or what the public can buy with its cash income in terms of food, clothes, shelter, travel and entertainment at the start of April, 1939, was $1.08 against $1.00 at the same time a year ago. "Cash income" was $1.06 at the beginning of April, 1939, against $1.00 at the start of April, 1938, which "cash out go" was only 98 cents against $1.00 a year ago.

Wages Lead Gains

"Recording the greatest gain in cash income items," explained the Investors Syndicate study, "the 1938 wage dolllar by the start of April, 1939, had become $1.18. Wages at the start of March, 1939, were $1.16, compared with $1.00 a year earlier.

"Salaries at the start of April this year were $1.07, compared with $1.00 at the same season last year. Salaries at the beginning of March, 1939, were $1.06, against $1.00 at the like period of a year ago.

Dividends Less

"Investment income — dividend disbursements and interest payments—is the only item in the cash income group that is less now than it was at this time a year ago, comparisons being $1.00 at the start of April, 1938, against 76 cents at the beginning of last month. Payments being made a year ago reflected 1937 corporation profits. Those being made now reflect the lower earnings that prevailed generally in 1938.

"The public at the start of April was paying only 96 cents for clothing which a year ago cost $1.00. Their food costs at the start of last month were only 97 cents, compared with $1.00 12 months earlier.

"Rents, whether houses or apartments, during March, 1939, were 2 cents on the dollar less than a year ago. Miscellaneous items, such as haircuts, shaves, manicures and dry cleaning, cost only 98 cents in March, 1939, against $1.00 in March, 1938."

Machinery Plants Now the Busiest Industrial Units

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 5.—Machinery plants are operating today at levels well above those of industry in general and well above those warranted by general industrial activity, a Standard Statistics survey says today, taking into consideration only the general trend toward mechanization which we have had with us since the turn of the century. First and foremost of these newer factors are the high cost of labor and the high cost of Government translated into taxes assessed and taxes to come. Social economists for some years have produced on the displacement of men by machines, but whether or not this is a good thing is aside from the point. The point is that given increasingly higher wage costs and increasingly higher taxes, the manufacturer has been literally forced by his urge to remain solvent to exercise his ingenuity in reducing unit costs in his plant.

The answer in a steadily increasing roster of industry has been to devise efficient tools and methods for boosting output without a corresponding addition to the pay roll—and this is where the machinery inventor and builders enter the picture. This is the factor that has caused the machine tool makers to operate so far this year at around 170 per cent of their 1926 rate, while industry as a whole stumbles along at less than 90 per cent of its pace of 13 years ago.

Superimposed on this absolute necessity for reducing manufacturing costs has been the stimulating effect of increases in world armaments and the nower expanding industries, such as aviation, Diesel engines, etc.

This trend toward further mechanization is so basic as to suggest that the sales and earnings of leading machinery producers will continue to show betterment during the current year, compared with 1938.

Gold Importations $224,883,752 in Week

Gold imports totaled $224,883,752 in the week ended April 28. The Commerce Department said yesterday that the week's shipments included $151,818,196 from England; $20,157,279 from Belgium; $20,140,749 from the Netherlands; $20,010,100 from Switzerland; $3,528,062 from Japan; $3,287,500 from India, and $2,331,367 from Canada. Silver imports amounted to $1,511,569 and included $671,743 from Mexico, $239,749 from England, and $229,727 from Peru. Exports included $32,671 of gold and $492,797 of silver.

"Business Tree" Shows Employes How G.M. Sales Dollar is Divided

This "business tree," one of more than a score of illustrations in General Motors' first annual report to employes, on its 1938 business, gives a graphic illustration of how the sales dollar is divided. Total receipts from customers are represented by the width of the trunk of the tree. The width of the various branches coming out of the trunk indicates the size of the principal outgo items and expenses of doing business, such as materials, supplies and upkeep, wages, salaries, taxes, dividends, and so on.

Stocks Drift Lower in Stagnant Trading No Incentive in Domestic or Foreign News Bond Market Firm, Treasurys Leading

New York, May 5.—With neither domestic or foreign news supplying incentive to buyers or sellers, security markets returned to the stagnant, narrow state which prevailed a week ago. Turnover on the big board amounted to only 327,990 shares, not much larger than the low for a five-hour session established Monday. The composite for the 100 key stocks ended with a loss of 0.14 point with declines well distributed in all divisions of the list. Bonds were generally firm, particularly in investment descriptions. Speculative rails followed the lower tendencies of stocks.

The indefiniteness rather than bearishness of news tended to keep traders on the sidelines. In addition, there were quite a few of the brokers and independent operators absent, taking advantage of one of the few nice days this spring to attend the World Fair or get out in the countryside. Business originating outside of New York was just as scarce as the local variety.

Auto Output Drops

In the United States, the principal item of industrial news was the sharp decline in automobile production to 71,420 units from 86,640 a week ago. This resulted from the two major producers cutting one day a week from schedules for May. Ward's, meanwhile, has revised downward its estimate of second quarter motor car production. In the June quarter last year, auto production was 637,705 units. While observers generally had expected some reduction in output, the drop of 15,220 cars was quite a bit more than most of them had estimated. Apparently the bad weather which prevailed throughout April in most sections of the country, affected sales rather severely.

Motor shares, while among the most active, were steadier than the run of stocks. General Motors and Packard gave up small fractions but Chrysler, again the leader in turnover, gained half a point.

Steels lost small fractions as news from some of the producing centers indicated operations will be about unchanged next week from the current level. Failure to arrive at a settlement in the coal strike was widely commented on in financial and stockbroker circles, one view being that it has already been quite detrimental to general business. To New Yorkers, the strike situation was brought home by a 25 per cent reduction in service on some subways. Merchants feared that this, if prolonged, would be inconvenient and annoying to the crowds from out of town for the fair as well as to regular patrons. For the steel industry as a whole, coal supplies seem adequate for a month to six weeks, but some of the small independents, railroad car shops and miscellaneous steel consumers have been obliged to curtail operations. This, of course, transmits dullness in trade through to retail lines.

Building Active

Figures on engineering construction awards for April supported previous estimates of recovery in this industry. The awards totaled $240,735,000, a weekly average of $60,184,000. This was up 5 per cent from the weekly average for March and 25 per cent ahead of April, 1938.

Brokers commented on the increased buying for cash, which, along with the dullness of markets, could account for the 16 per cent decline in brokers' loans during April, to a total of $547,443,175 at the end of the month.

Foreign exchange dealings reflected the lull in the European situation, with currencies of the leading countries a bit higher against the dollar. Cotton improved a few points more in orderly dealings while wheat closed unchanged to slightly lower, with interest rather lackadaisical.

Treasury Bonds in Demand

High grade investment bonds were firm today in a quiet listed market session, while speculative varieties of senior obligations turned irregular. Long term United States Treasury bonds were in keen demand but poor supply, and still another series of record highs appeared. The cheaper rail bonds were uneven, as there is much uncertainty regarding legislative amelioration of the carrier problem. Most foreign dollar bonds again were higher. Turnover amounted to $4,970,000.

Long term Treasury obligations advanced from small fractions nearly to a half point, owing to fresh indications of bank buying. Medium term bonds were up by smallest fractions. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations moved forward readily. One of the telephone debenture issues attained a record high, and good inquiry was reported also for best rated power and light, railroad and industrial issues.

Medium-priced carrier bonds failed to develop a trend. Some issues improved slightly and others were down as much. Borderline and default rails were neglected. Holding company bonds and convertible issues were irregular. Local traction issues softened on the curtailment of services due to the coal strike. Amusement, communications and other special groups displayed a mildly uncertain tone.

Polish bonds were marked higher in the foreign department, following the address of Col. Beck in reply to Chancellor Hitler. Italians were in demand, and there was a little buying of German default bonds . . . Scandinavians remained good and there was a little inquiry for Australian and Canadian bonds. Latin-American default obligations were dull and irregular.

Europe May Force U. S. Into War, Dr. Young Says

New York, May 5 (AP).—Dr. Ralph A. Young, associate professor of economics in the Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, University of Pennsylvania, said today if general European hostilities should break out, an "actual state of war" might be "forced upon us, just as it was in 1917."

"Under existing legislation, with the force of public opinion aggressively opposed to the dictatorships, it is probable that our vast resources would add incalculably to the power and endurance of the democracies, perhaps even turn the scales in their favor," he declared. "This conclusion, of course ignores the possibility of a successful lightning attack forcing the swift capitulation of the democracies.

"A sizable portion of our industrial capacity would be diverted to war uses, and a mild boom would probably result. But along with dubious advantages would go grim disadvantages. Finally, there would be the constant tendency on our part to get more and more deeply involved until an actual state of war would be forced upon us, just as it was in 1917."

Young, also Dr. S. S. Huebner, Wharton School professor of insurance and commerce, were speakers at a forum conducted by the school here today. Huebner, commenting on securities prices, said the stock market "has substantially discounted the war situation for the time being."

New York, May 5 (AP).—New security issues marketed this week totaled $45,608,668 and represented 93 per cent new money, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

Tax Exempt Bar Held Burden on Municipalities

New York, May 5 (AP).—Abolition of tax exempt securities, as proposed recently by President Roosevelt, would impose a heavy penalty on local taxpayers, Dr. Harley L. Lutz, of Princeton University, contended today in an address before the Municipal Bond Club.

Dr. Lutz, the university's professor of public finance, asserted his studies had brought him to the conclusion that taxation of municipal securities would lead to an increase in municipal interest rates of 60 points. He denied there was any unusual concentration of these bonds in the hands of the wealthy, and challenged the widely held theory that municipal tax exempts afforded a tax haven for rich investors.

He contended that in the case of municipal bonds subject to Federal taxation with a 3 per cent interest rate, it would mean an increase in their financing costs of around 20 per cent, which could only be met by increased local taxes.

"This additional burden on States and cities throughout the country," he continued, "might amount to as much as $113,000,000 annually."

He also contended that most of the States would have no opportunity to recoup this loss by the taxation of Federal securities because holdings of these are concentrated in a few of the more prosperous States.

Lehigh Valley Plan Declared Effective

New York, May 5 (AP).—Lehigh Valley Railroad Co. today announced it had declared effective the company's plan dated January 4, 1939, providing for postponement of part of this year's interest on bonds and notes and a modification of sinking funds.

The company said 81 per cent of the first and refunding mortgage sinking fund bonds, 5 per cent series of 1924 (all maturities), and 79 per cent of the secured 6 per cent notes, class "A," due January 1, 1943, had assented to the plan, and an extension of time until the close of business June 1 had been granted to give non-assenting holders further opportunity to accept the plan.

Argentina Expands Her Foreign Trade

Buenos Aires, May 5.—A summary of Argentina's foreign trade shows how the country has steadily improved its position since September of last year.

This statement reveals that the total adverse trade balance of 1938, which amounted to 60,434,990 pesos, has already been more than offset, as favorable trade balance for the first three months this year totals 65,017,073 pesos.

Railroads Face Another Loss For This Year

But Present Outlook Is That 1939 Deficit Will Be Smaller

New York, May 5.—The actual number of freight cars loaded in the first quarter and the forecast made by the Shippers' Board of the volume to be loaded in the second quarter indicate that annual freight loadings in 1939 will range between a high of 34,332,000 and a low of 30,365,000, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The normal expectation is that 31,905,000 cars will be loaded.

These figures on prospective car loadings this year provide a basis for estimating operating revenues Computation of indexes on the basis of 1929 as 100 show that since 1929 the index of car loadings times the index of freight rates has approximately equaled the index of revenues. On the assumption that freight rates during 1939 will remain at the same level as in 1938, the estimates of car loadings this year indicate that the index of gross operating revenues will range from a high of 64.0 to a low of 56.7, with a normal expectation of 59.5.

If the index of gross operating revenues in 1939 is equal to the normal expectation of 59.5, revenues this year will amount to $3,736,000,000. This will be only slightly higher than the 1938 revenues of $3,565,000,000. Consequently, it is apparent that revenues this year will not be sufficient to provide the railroads with profitable operations.

Deficit Put at $103,000,000

The prospect is that the railroads this year will have a deficit of $103,000,000, which will be only a slight improvement over the 1938 showing when the railroads had a deficit of $112,000,000. The showing last year was nearly as large as the deficit of $139,000,000 at the bottom of the depression in 1932. With the exception of 1932, the railroads in 1938 made a far worse showing than in any year since the depression began in 1929.

If operating revenues in 1939 exceed the normal expectation and equal the highest figure which it is possible to estimate at the present time, the railroads will still end the year with a substantial deficit. The indicated deficit under such conditions is $73,000,000. If revenues in 1939 should fall below the normal expectation to the lowest possible figure, the deficit this year would amount to $131,000,000, a figure approximately equal to last year's deficit.

Cotton Higher As Spot Firms Bid Briskly

New York, May 5 (AP).—Old crop cotton deliveries rose to the best levels since August last year today. Lively bidding by spot houses and the trade left the close 5 to 8 points up when only limited offerings appeared.

Persistent price fixing by trade accounts in May and July and buying by a leading spot interest in July and October—which took care of most of the offerings—dominated the advance. Additional support in the last hour put the list close to the day's highs.

Despite a slightly better demand for textiles at firm prices, Worth street reports indicated the week's sales would fall far below production.

Exports today, 4,526 bales; season so far, 3,162,374; port receipts, 8,125; port stocks, 2,097,846.

M.J.Kavanaugh Will Run for Arlington Post

Lawyer and Druggist To Seek Election to The County Board

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

Minor J. Kavanaugh, of Lyon Park, yesterday announced his candidacy for the county board, subject to the Democratic primary August 1.

KAVANAUGH

He was born near Woodstock in 1904. He is a graduate in pharmacy from the Medical College of Virginia, a graduate of Cumberland University School of Law and a member of the Virginia bar, and has been engaged in the drug business for fifteen years.

He feels that, due to his legal knowledge and busines experience, he is well qualified to serve as a member of the governing body of Arlington County.

He is a lifelong Democrat, member of the County Democratic Executive Committee, parliamentarian of the Young Democratic Club of the county, president of the Lyon Park Citizens Association, member of the Arlington Kiwanis Club and has been actively engaged in civic matters in the county.

As candidate for the county board, he said, "I advocate the extension of sidewalks throughout the county, the establishment of further parks and play grounds, paid firemen, and an increased compensation for members of the police force, as the county finances wi'l justify.

"I am sympathetic to the present county manager form of government and will co-operate with the County Manager in keeping the county on a sound financial basis and at all times maintaining a balanced budget and promise a fair and impartial administration of county affairs."

Voting Registrars Named

Arlington.—With today the deadline for payment of poll taxes to permit citizens to vote in the Democratic primary August 1, and in the general election in November, Claude O. Fairfax Board Delays School Book Rentals

Plan, However, Will Be Used in Large Buildings This Year

The Fairfax County School Board yesterday voted not to put the full text book rental system in the county schools next year, because of the amount of work necessary to establish the system effectively in all schools. It is hoped to install a modified rental system in some of the larger schools and gradually expand to include a full rental system.

The Board approved the sale at auction last month of several abandoned school properties. Sales approved and the amounts were: Legato, $2,050; Wakefield, in Lee District, $525; Lincolnia, on the Little River Pike in Falls Church District, $650; Colchester, in Lee District near Lorton, $380, and Potters Hill site, in Mount Vernon District, $975.

It was voted to grant the 4-H Clubs of the county the use of four school buses to convey club members to the summer 4-H Club camp, all costs to be paid by the clubs.

A resolution was passed approving the proposed dance to be given by the County Young Democratic Club in honor of the graduates of the four high schools in the county.

Brown Battered in Film Fight Scenes

Brown, featured with the star, Victor McLaglen, in "Ex-Champ," is cast as a young fellow trying to win the world's boxing championship. The action of the picture calls for him to box a half-dozen rounds with Kid Chissell, former U. S. Navy champion, and to do a lot of road work.

First day's boxing left Brown so stiff and sore that he has now hired Abdullah Abbis, McLaglen's trainer, to put him in shape for the remainder of the picture. A forthcoming sequence shows Brown doing road work.

"I've got to get in shape to go in training" he says.

WINNIE WINKLE — The Depth of Despair — BY BRANNER

WARREN IS BACK OF THIS, WINNIE!
I'D HAVE THOUGHT SO, TOO, IF BILL HADN'T REMEMBERED ME—BUT HE DID!
NO, I GUESS BILL IS MAD AT ME! AFTER ALL, WARREN CAN DO SO MUCH FOR HIM—THANK YOU, MOTHER, AND GOOD NIGHT!
IF ANY ONE HAD TOLD ME BILL AND I WOULD SPLIT UP, I'D NEVER HAVE BELIEVED HIM!
OH, I KNOW BILL WILL BE BETTER OFF WITHOUT ME, BUT I JUST CAN'T GIVE HIM UP!

MR. AND MRS. — One Day After Another — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

SAY, WHY DON'T WE HAVE SOME COMPANY?
WHY?
BECAUSE YOU NEVER WANT TO GO OUT OF AN EVENING
WHAT'S THAT GOT TO DO WITH IT? I MEAN PEOPLE HERE
OUR FRIENDS HAVE FORGOTTEN WE EXIST
WELL, CAN'T WE REMIND 'EM? ASK SOMEBODY IN TO HAVE A GAME
I WON'T DO IT. IT'S THEIR TURN TO ASK US
WELL, WHY DON'T THEY ASK US?
BECAUSE WHEN THEY DID, YOU WOULDN'T GO. WE MIGHT AS WELL BE DEAD!

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

The elegant J. Throckmorton Wisp, the wise player, couldn't win. If the goddess of luck had been profligate in showering her favors upon him two days before, she completely disowned him now leaving him to shift for himself in a desert of low cards. His three companions, chafing under their loss and determined on revenge, did not make it any easier.

The Coup de Grace

The hand that put the finishing touch on poor Mr. Wisp is shown in today's box. He already had lost his wad of bills and the mortgage on his luxurious suite, when it happened.

The bidding, though far from expert, had a unique quality about it. Mr. Wisp, not vulnerable, put in a weak semi-psychic overcall, and then assisted his partner's spade bid in an attempt to keep the adversaries out of a slam; but, alas, his partner misunderstood his motives, took his violent bidding at its face value, and insisted upon doubling the opponents at five hearts which was redoubled to give them two overtricks and nearly the value of the grand slam, anyway.

North made seven hearts, redoubled, for a trick score of 600 points, plus 800 points for overtricks, and 700 for the rubber, a total of 2,100 points.

When it was all over, to the astonishment of his companions, Mr. Wisp painstakingly removed his cravat, his coat, his waistcoat and then his trousers, and with a grand gesture offered them to his adversaries and withdrew.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

A RELAXING of that troublesome Q. S. and L. (quarters, subsistence and laundry) for Veterans Administration facilities employes is definitely indicated in a letter Administrator Frank T. Hines has written the American Federation of Government Employes. This is, in part:

"Through a change in policy of the Veterans Administration that will be announced immediately, employes assigned to non-housekeeping quarters, who maintain homes in the vicinity of the station for persons wholly dependent upon them, will be relieved of the charges for allowances upon their request or option."

For those in positions of hospital attendant, mess attendant, laborer, janitor, guard, chauffeur, mechanic's helper, cook, chef, head cook, baker, meat cutter and head attendant, 40 per cent will be required to have quarters assigned to them. According to the present policy, 50 per cent of employes in these positions have been subject to this requirement, the administrator stated.

"In affecting adjustments under this new policy, those who are classified as food handlers in accordance with our regulations will not be relieved of the charge for subsistence, but only of the charge for quarters, and also for laundry if this is provided. Further action, however, may provide for changes in the classification of food handlers, which subject is having continued study," he said.

JOBS: The CSC announces open competitive examinations for positions as follows: instrument maker, $7.77 to $8.73 a day; leather maker, $5.76 to $6.72 a day; buffer and polisher, $7 to $7.96 a day; foundry chipper, $5.18 to $6.14 a day; sandblaster, $5.95 to $6.91 a day; welder (electric), $7.29 to $8.25 a day, and welder (gas), $7.10 to $8.06 a day. All these are on a 40-hour, five-day week. Applications for all these but instrument maker must be on file with the Recorder, Labor Board, Navy Yard, Washington, not later than May 11. The deadline on instrument maker applications is May 23.

LETTER to the Diary: "Federal employe veterans who were not disabled in the service and peacetime veterans are fearful lest two measures wtih the Civil Service Committee are reported out. At a meeting of the Gen. Malin Craig Post, No. 20, of the Regular Veterans Association, spokesmen from the War, GAO, Veterans Administration, Navy and SSB, criticized the sponsors of the bills which would limit military preference to disabled veterans in one measure and in the other deny preference to peace-time veterans. Roy R. G. Cockings, of the GAO, was admitted to membership in the association, with 18 other veterans."

THE next business meeting of N. F. F. E. Treasury Local Union 262 will be held Monday evening at 8 in Suite 604, 710 Fourteenth street northwest, and will be followed by a meeting of the board of directors of the local's credit union. Secretary Elmer C. Hooper says that members should submit not later than June 1 such resolutions as they desire to have considered at the fifteenth convention of the N. F. F. E. to be held this summer in San Francisco.

GOODBYES: Peter Bisset, senior horticulturist of the Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, retires after 29 years' service; Mrs. Agnes Chase, senior botanist, Bureau of Plant Industry, 40 years' service.

THE condition of the Civil Service apportionment on April 29 shows States in excess, as follows: Massachusetts, Wyoming, Utah, Missouri, Colorado, Vermont, Washington, Montana, Kansas, Minnesota, North Dakota, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Bob Burns Says—

All my life I've heard that appearances are deceivin' but I never took much stock in it until the first time I tried to sleep in a nice lookin' bed in a 35 cents a night hotel.

We use'ta think that Grandpa Snazzy would wear that old pair of overalls to his own funeral until he saw an advertisement in the Fort Smith paper one time. It showed a picture of a man holding a big dog. The man had one foot on a pretty car and he was wearin' one of them $27 herringbone sport suits with a belt in the back. That ad did somethin' to Grandpa Snazzy and he started savin' up his cotton money to answer that ad.

He saved for over seven years; finally, one day he had the money. We all went down to see him off to Fort Smith and there were tears of happiness in his old eyes—at last his dream was to be realized.

Well, when he came back he was wearin' the suit all right—but he was the most mournful lookin' man you ever seen. We all says, "Grandpaw, what in the world is the matter? Why do you look so miserable?"

And he says, "Doggonit, why didn't some of you TELL me that that dog and car didn't come with the suit!"

Rescue Mission Benefit Concert Set Wednesday

Lady Asquith Ends 'Inside Story' of Royal Family

By Lady Cynthia Asquith.

Chapter XXIV

A solemn destiny now claims this happy family. Circumstances bitterly sad have changed the whole course of their lives.

An elder brother, long loved as a well-graced prince, who had done much service to the state, and from whom as a king great things were hoped, resigns his heritage ("Le Roi le veut") and lays down his heavy burden, which it becomes the unwelcome duty of his unself-seeking younger brother to shoulder. A stern duty and a formidable fate to become king in a world where monarchy has almost ceased to exist.

How much European civilization has changed since England was last gladdened by the glorious pageantry of a coronation can scarcely be realized. All through the vicissitudes of those 27 years crowns have been falling like leaves in an autumn gale.

Why is it that, whilst all around us emperors and kings have been swept from their thrones, there is as yet in our country nothing large enough to be called a republican party, and the monarchy still stands unshaken, "broad-based upon the people's will?"

King's Prestige Upheld

For this state of affairs our national character is no doubt largely responsible, gifted as it is with the sense to see in the lonely crown something that, standing above all political parties, gives a sense of continuity and security no other institution could possibly give.

But apart from this circumstance there can be no doubt that the personality, disposition and sagacity of King George V played a large part in upholding the prestige of his great office.

Queen Elizabeth and Princess Elizabeth are here shown as they attended a matinee performance of the Children's Christmas Show in London. They attend many functions together

Irrevocably gone are the days when monarchies could be safeguarded by any pretensions to Divine Right, the appeal to tradition, or the exercise of force. They can now be preserved only by the highest form of public service, by understanding, sympathy and diligent devotion to the general welfare.

All these demands were met by George V, of whom, just before the war, the American ambassador wrote in his diary: "The exact importance of the King in the government I could not explain in three hours—if I could at all. But it is even much more important than people think. His real power grows out of his personality."

The nation, who still mourns the loss of a beloved King, rejoices to recognize in the son who must now play his part many of the the kingly qualities.

In his speech to the House of Commons on December 14, Mr. Baldwin said: "I have the honor of knowing the new King well, and I would tell the House—if they do not know it already—that what will endear him to his people, if he be not already endeared, is that more than any of his brothers he resembles in character and mind his father."

Gratefully aware of this likeness, the people may place full confidence in their new King. He will not betray their trust.

And however arduous the task of him, who now becomes the "chief servant of the state," we rejoice to know that he has one great solace and advantage.

To quote the moving words of his brother the abdicated King, "he has what has not been granted to me, the matchless blessing of a happy home with his wife and children."

Yes, we may feel confident that the gentle but strong personality of his consort will always provide the peace and quietude so necessary to the tired and harassed; and, whatever the exertions of his great office, our new King's natural taste for simplicity and quiet family life will never be wholly starved, for, in spite of its immense size and vast staff, Buckingham Palace will always remain as genuine a home as any cottage in the country.

To quote the Archbishop of Canterbury: "King George will have at his side the gentle strength and quiet wisdom of a wife who has already endeared herself to all by her grace, her charm, her bright and eager kindliness of heart."

Queen Is Helpmeet

Queen Mary (the first English Queen, since Eleanor of Aquitaine, to be the wife of one King and the mother of two Kings) had always delighted in her daughter-in-law, who, in her turn, both loves and admires her mother-in-law. In her letter to the people on the accession of her second son, Queen Mary wrote, "I commend my dear daughter-in-law who will be his Queen. May she receive the same affection and trust which you have given to me for six-and-twenty years."

And in his first message delivered through Parliament to the nation and the empire, the husband spoke for himself: "It will be my constant endeavor with God's help, supported as I shall be by my dear wife, to uphold the honor of the realm and promote the happiness of my peoples."

Assured that he will, indeed, devote his entire life to the welfare of the country, we fervently wish our new King continued strength to bear the burden thrust upon him and long enjoyment of his "matchless blessing."

And Queen Elizabeth herself? She who has so truly earned the honorable title of helpmeet. To the delight of his life, the guardian angel of his children, the Queen of his people; we give our gratitude for the past and our trust for the future.

For any junior knows that washables are the background of an eye-filling warm weather wardrobe! We've gathered a summer-full for you to choose from. Soft sweet cotton laces, French rayon crepes, spun rayons, dainty lawns . . . in pretty pastels, dots, stripes, nosegay prints, plain and print combinations. You'll recognize them at once as "very Carole King"—and, of course, not only juniors, but all those who wear junior sizes, will be snapping them up for the smartest summer ever! For sizes 9 to 17.
